Sleeping Sickness Attacks Its Third Victim in This City

Four-Year-Old Child in King Street Latest Sufferer From Disease

The third case in Lowell within a short time of encephalitis lethargica, commonly known as sleeping sickness, was reported to the board of health today. The sufferer from the disease is little Russell Creamer, four years old, of 31 King street, a short thoroughfare leading from Middlesex to Jackson street. The case was reported by Dr. McCluskey, of 46 Middlesex street. The little boy has been sick five weeks. Six physicians had examined him before the disease was finally diagnosed as sleeping sickness. The house is not quarantined in any way, although the state board of health made the disease reportable as an infectious one yesterday.

The father of the child is William Creamer, son of Hugh Creamer, a contractor, who resides on Highland avenue. The mother is Mary Creamer, who is a Lowell girl. The family has lived in the present residence for three years.

Rejection of Treaty, Fight on Wilson by G. O. P., Suffrage and Prohibition

Big Features of Sessions of 66th Congress Which Passed Out Today

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Rejection of the treaty of Versailles, a sharp fight on President Wilson by republican leaders, adoption of the woman suffrage constitutional amendment and passage of the prohibition enforcement act were outstanding features of the sessions of the sixty-sixth congress which passed out today to make way for the sixty-seventh congress, soon to be called in extra session by President Harding.

Sweep into control by both the senate and house near the end of the session.

Warren G. Harding Becomes Head of Nation With Simple But Impressive Ceremonies

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Warren G. Harding of Ohio and Calvin Coolidge of Massachusetts, were inaugurated today president and vice president of the United States.

Mr. Harding took the oath at 1:18 p. m., and Mr. Coolidge at 1:21 p. m. Pressing his lips to a historic Bible used at the inauguration of George Washington, the new president took the oath administered by Chief Justice White. He had chosen the eighth verse from the sixth chapter of Isaiah, saying: "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God?"

Wilson Leaves for New Home President Wilson, yielding to the last minute entreaties of his family and his physician, took no part in the inaugural ceremonies, other than to accompany the incoming president from the White House to the capitol, where he signed some bills and then went with Mrs. Wilson to the new home which will be theirs in the residential section of the city.

Immediately after the administration of the oath, Mr. Harding turned to the vast crowd which stretched across the capitol plaza, and began the delivery of his inaugural address.

Sound amplifiers carried his voice to the outskirts of the big assembly. A chill wind feebly warmed by a bright sun, swept the broad space which appeared strangely in contrast of other years when it has been illuminated by the uniforms of West Point cadets, midshipmen from Annapolis and troops.

Plea For Return to "Normalcy" Pledging his faith anew to American institutions, President Harding reiterated a plea for a return to "normalcy" for industrial peace, for friendship with the world and spoke again a promise to work for an association of nations to bring about peace and "approximate" disarmament.

He coupled his renewed declarations with a fresh pronouncement against "entangling alliances," "America," he said, "can enter into no political commitments, nor assume any economic obligations which will subject our decisions to any other than our own authority."

No Entangling Alliances "I am sure our people will not understand nor will the world misconstrue. We have no thought to impede the paths to closer relationship. We wish to promote understanding. We want to do our part to make offensive warfare no hateful that governments and people who resort to it, must prove the righteousness of their cause or stand as outlaws before the bar of civilization."

Then speaking of his latest determination to enter no "entangling alliances," Mr. Harding declared: "This is not selfishness, it is sanity. It is not aloofness, it is security. It is not suspicion of others, it is patriotic adherence to the things which made us what we are."

Immediately at the conclusion of the inaugural address, the small party reformed and took motor cars back to the White House, escorted by the cavalry troops which had brought it to the capitol.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—President Harding in his inaugural address today said:

My Countrymen, when one surveys the world about him after the great storm, noting the marks of destruction and yet rejoicing in the ruggedness of the things which withstood it, if he is an American he breathes the clarified atmosphere with a strange mingling of regret and new hope. We have seen world passion spend its fury, but we contemplate our republic unshaken and hold our civilization secure. Liberty—liberty within the law—and civilization are inseparable and though both were threatened we find them now secure, and there comes to Americans the profound assurance that our representative government is the highest expression and surest guarantee of both.

Standing in this presence, mindful of the solemnity of this occasion, feeling the conditions which no one may know until he senses the great weight of responsibility for himself, I must utter my belief in the divine inspiration of the founding fathers. Surely there must have been God's intent in the making of this new world republic. Ours is an organized law which had but one dignity, and we saw that effaced in a baptism of sacrifice and blood, with union maintained, the nation supreme and its concord inspiring. We have seen the world river its hopeful gaze on the great truths on which the founders wrought. We have seen civil, human and religious liberty verified and glorified. In the beginning, the old world scoffed at our experiment; today our foundations of political and social belief stand unshaken, a precious inheritance to ourselves, an inspiring example of freedom and civilization to all mankind. Let us express renewed and strengthened devotion, in grateful reverence for the immortal beginning, and utter our confidence in the supreme fulfillment.

Progress Proves Wisdom "The recorded progress of our republic, materially and spiritually, in itself proves the wisdom of the inheritance."

Liquor Squad Find Stills, and Moonshine in Summer Street House

The case of John Fernandez of Summer street, charged with illegally keeping liquor for purposes of sale, was continued to tomorrow morning in the police court today, government witnesses being absent. The defendant spent last night in the police station, after a raid by the liquor squad and other officers unearthed a large still and quantities of mash and moonshine in his possession. A friend who visited him shortly after his arrest failed to secure the $500 bonds, which were fixed, and were continued today. Fernandez insisted last night and this morning that the liquor was for his own use, and he tearfully bewailed his fortune in being confined. He told the court that he is out of work and has three children. Officers Winn, Moore, Cooney, O'Sullivan, Clark and Kivlan engineered the raid.

MARCH WIND FOR INAUGURATION

Visitors Poured Into Washington During Early Part of the Day

Mayor Hyman Sends Message to Harding Via Airplane

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Bright weather, with a cold, blustering March wind, marked the opening of inauguration day. Some clouds were banked in the east in the early morning, but these soon gave way before the driving northwest wind and made it seemingly certain that Warren G. Harding would be able to take the oath of office in the open on the east portico of the capitol as planned.

There was a decided overnight drop in temperature with indications that it would be somewhat uncomfortable for the crowds on the capitol plaza and along Pennsylvania avenue.

Although spectators, military and civil, which have marked inaugurations in the past, had been put under the ban by the incoming president, visitors still poured into Washington during the early part of the day. The capitol plaza drew many of them and the vanguard of the thousands who were to crowd parks there for several blocks was on hand before 8 o'clock.

They had approximately five hours to wait before Mr. Harding would take the oath of office and accordingly had brought along campstools or boxes on which to rest.

The president-elect and Mrs. Harding were up at 8 o'clock and had breakfast in their suite at the New Willard hotel. Mr. Harding then read the morning newspapers.

Gets Message Via Airplane

After breakfast, Mr. Harding shaved himself and dressed leisurely. His first visitors of the day were two police captains from New York, who came to Washington in an airplane to present a message from Mayor Hyman.

The vice president-elect and Mrs. Coolidge also arose early and had breakfast in their suite at the New Willard with Mr. Coolidge's father, Col. John Calvin Coolidge, their two sons, John and Calvin, Jr., and several personal friends.

Asked how he felt on the morning of his inauguration day, the vice president-elect said he did not feel half as important today as he did on the occasion of his graduation from high school.

President Wilson arose at 8 o'clock and after breakfast with Mrs. Wilson, he went to his study. White House officials said the president was a little fagged as the result of working late last night on bills and other official business.

Despite the abandonment of the inaugural procession and other ceremonies, there were many marching clubs, boosters' clubs and "original" Harding organizations on hand. A great many of them came from Ohio.

Thermometers along Pennsylvania avenue showed 30 degrees and the wind had a sharp bite to it around 9 o'clock but before 10 the mercury had climbed 10 degrees up the scale and was still going up.

The day's program was officially opened with the arrival of the congressional inaugural committee at the New Willard at 9:50.

President-elect Harding, with Mrs. Harding and the vice president-elect and Mrs. Coolidge left their hotel for the White House at 10:20 a. m. They were accompanied by members of the congressional inaugural committee and riding in columns on either side of the automobiles were four troops of cavally from Fort Myer with drawn sabres. Accompanying the president-elect in the White House automobile, was Senator Knox, chairman of the inaugural committee, and Representative Cannon. Next came an automobile bearing Vice President-elect Coolidge, Vice President Marshall and other members of the inaugural committee. In a third automobile, were Mrs. Harding and other members of the congressional committee. In another machine rode Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Marshall. Cheers for Harding and Coolidge. The procession turned from Pennsylvania avenue into 15th street and then moved over Pennsylvania avenue again to the White House. The machines set a stiff pace for the cavalrymen.

The president-elect and vice president-elect were justly cheered by the crowds. The party reached the White House in less than five minutes.

When the presidential automobiles reached the main entrance to the White House the president-elect and members of his party with the congressional committee entered the White House. After a stay of half an hour, the party came out. President Wilson and the president-elect walking together at the head of the party.

the front door to the step where the White House automobile waited. He leaned on his cane, but was otherwise unassisted until he reached the steps.

He was helped down the steps and into the car by White House attendants, who placed his feet on each succeeding step as the descent was made.

The president-elect waited until Mr. Wilson had been assisted into the car, and had taken his seat. Then he and Senator Knox and Representative Cannon entered the car. When the party was seated, President Wilson raised his hat slightly and with the signal a battery of cameras began to click.

Vice President Marshall assumed the chair of the senate immediately after his arrival at the capitol. Waiting for the inaugural ceremonies some senators shouted: "Vote, vote!" on the naval appropriation bill and Senator Lodge moved a recess of 15 minutes until 11:45 a. m.

Soon after the president entered the room, Mr. Harding left for the senate chamber. Meantime the president took up the work of signing bills as they were presented to him by the White House executive clerk.

The president signed the sundry civil and hospital appropriation bills, the resolution voting $1500 to Mrs. Champ Clark and some minor bills. It was said he would pocket the immigration restriction bill.

Meantime the house had adjourned sine die at 11:30 a. m.

The babel of the senate recess was halted sharply at 11:45 by the vice president's gavel. The senate then adopted the house resolution for a committee to wait on President Wilson to ascertain if he had any further requests.

President Wilson left the capitol at 11:55 and drove to his new home on 8 street.

The house of representatives was announced to the senate chamber at 11:55.

The senate clock was turned back

15 minutes at five minutes before noon. Senator Lodge soon announced that President Wilson had no further communications to make to congress.

THE HARDINGS' LAST DAY AT HOME!

The Hardings' last day at home in Marion, O., was marked by an affectionate farewell by the townsfolk who have known them intimately most all their lives. The famous "front porch" saw its last reception when thousands of the Marion people gathered to present the new president and first lady with a silver-plaque. The presentation was made by Rev. T. B. McAfee (at Mrs. Harding's left), pastor of Trinity Baptist Church which the Hardings attend. During the ceremony Mrs. Harding broke into tears. At its conclusion she pressed a rose from her bouquet into her husband's hand, then scattered the rest among the crowd. Mr. and Mrs. Harding then shook hands with thousands, calling many by their first names—including even the newshy, whom the president greeted as "Bob, Smithy and Red."

Pray For Pres. Harding's Success

CLEVELAND, March 4.—Prayers that Warren G. Harding may have a successful administration and that the country may enjoy peace and prosperity under his direction, were offered in St. John's Roman Catholic church today. The prayer of Bishop Charles Carroll, written more than a century ago, and recited only in times of great public events, was read. During the final service of the retreat of the Knights of Columbus tonight, the rosary will be said for the new president.

FINAL SESSION OF 66TH CONGRESS

House and Senate Members
Wearied by Series of Day and Night Sessions

Enactment of Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill—Veto of Fordney Bill Upheld

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Wearied by a series of long day and night sessions, members of the senate and house went to the capitol early today for the final session of the 66th congress.

The house, meeting at 9:30 o'clock, and the senate an hour later, expected a quick end to the final battle with the legislative jam which from time immemorial has marked the close of a congressional session. Only action on minor measures was planned before sine die adjournment, the legislative record of the expiring session having been closed when the senate recessed at 1 o'clock this morning and when the house temporarily suspended its sittings shortly after 2 o'clock.

Veto of Tariff Bill Upheld

The final sessions were productive of only one piece of legislation—final enactment of the $253,000,000 sundry civil appropriation bill after the senate had receded from its amendment to appropriate $10,000,000 for continuation of work on the Wilson dam project at Muscle Shoals, Ala. The house attempted to override President Wilson's veto of the Fordney emergency tariff bill, but failed by a margin of 21 votes, the ballot showing 201 against and 132 for sustaining the veto.

Enactment of the sundry civil budget left only one—the naval bill—of the 16 major appropriation measures undisposed of as the army bill was sent to the president late yesterday and the sundry civil measure was delivered to the White House early today. These two bills were the only supply measures awaiting presidential approval.

All except one passage by the senate of the naval bill disappeared at the night session.

In addition to the two appropriation bills, President Wilson had before him the immigration restriction measure, and the bill appropriating $15,000,000 for hospitalization of former service men.

The president stayed on later than usual last night, signing a number of measures, including the resolution repealing most of the war laws.

Proponents of the bill for government regulation of cold storage manufacturers had their forces early today to save the measure from defeat.

The report had been adopted by the senate and it was planned to obtain favorable action in the house before sine die adjournment.

Measures considered as certain of death with adjournment included three providing bonuses for former service men, regulation of the coal and iron industries, $100,000,000 for road bonds, a federal budget system, membership reappointment in the house and reorganization of the patent office.

MEXICAN COMMENT ON WILSON'S RETIREMENT

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—Bitterness against President Wilson and hope that Mr. Harding's administration would see the end of antagonism between the United States and Mexico were expressed by Mexican newspapers.

"Mr. Wilson's retirement," said the Excelsior, "the cause for nation-wide rejoicing in Mexico, which for eight long years has been obliged to suffer from the caprices of a man who alone is responsible for our unhappiness and miseries."

Addressing Mr. Harding as a fellow newspaperman, El Sol, Palavancin, said the new president to "endeavor to consolidate for a sincere friendship between the United States and Mexico."

GORHAM STREET CHURCH RE-ELECTS PASTOR

Members of the Gorham Street P. M. church held their annual business meeting in the church vestry last evening. The meeting was called to order by Chief Steward Sam Asquith, prayer was offered by Thomas Noble and scripture readings were given by John Pooler. Richard C. Campbell acted as clerk.

A feature of the meeting was the election of a pastor for the ensuing year. Rev. N. W. Matthews being the unanimous choice of the meeting. Rev. J. T. Elton, of Fall River was second choice and Rev. J. Fredos of Brooklyn, third. At the close of the election the following committee was appointed to select the pastor to be church: Carl Johnson and Charles Nield, Jr. Upon being informed of his re-election the pastor delivered a short talk on church conditions.

Tellers were appointed as follows: Lester Prescott, Arthur Chapman, Roy Dobbs, George Byron and George Higginbottom. A resolution protesting against the leasing of a house for the packing house in the old Harvard plant was adopted and the secretary was instructed to mail a copy to members of the municipal council. The financial report of the church was read by Treasurer S. C. Rowe, while Moderator Thomas Gardner submitted a numerical and spiritual report of the church.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

(By Theatrical Press Agents)

SPECIAL AT THE STRAND

A special Saturday morning matinee will be held at the Strand tomorrow for the purpose of accommodating the large number of patrons, and more particularly the children, who are expected to attend at the regular performances. The prices of admission will be 11 and 15 cents, tax paid, and the usual program will be given.

For Sunday the same big program of superior grade vaudeville and excellent photoplays will be given. The special picture for Sunday will be "The White Slave," a real picture of the most striking and strongest characterizations in which this talented actress has appeared during her long and successful career. Milton Byron, as the high rising officer, is also scoring heavily, while Kenneth Fleming and the rest of the cast are seen in particular advantage.

Next week's presentation will be Earl Carroll's dramatic version of George Barr McCutcheon's great hit, "Daddy Dumbbells," a real success of the past season and only recently released for stock use. Milton Byron will appear in the title role and is sure to score one of his biggest hits.

THE STRAND

"Once to Every Woman," with Dorothy Phillips in the leading role, will be shown again at the Strand today and tomorrow, and those who have not seen this gripping and absorbing drama should avail themselves of the remaining opportunities. It is a big subject and is treated in a big, broad way. Another love is the main theme, both in "White Slave" and "Once to Every Woman" and this has an interesting unfolding of an old subject. A good comedy helps to round out a good program.

D. P. KUTNER'S THEATRE

An Egyptian woman dropped into the midst of an American house and created lots of havoc, as is shown in "Come Into the Kitchen," which is being played by Walter Fisher & Co. at the D. P. Kutner Theatre this week. It is a very lively affair, all the way through and unusual, to say the least. The witton sisters, Rose and Mabel, offer one of the prettiest, sweetest vaudeville acts seen in a long time. The sisters, who are by no means strangers here, sing and dance and play the violin and piano. Their work is of the very highest quality. "Come Into the Kitchen" is a comedy with "Capit" bring forth perfect dancing, some comedy and singing. This pair are almost too well known in the vaudeville world to need extended comment. Other acts on the lively bill are: Jack Osterman, monologist; Miss Nana, international dancer; the Thames Bros., comedians; and Emma O'Neill in "A Rare Bit."

RIALTO THEATRE

You tight fans and lovers of society drama in the squared ring, who suffer from disappointment, the hands of Betty Vaquer and Freddie Jacks by their refusal to come together at the Crescent A.A. this week, should go into the Rialto theatre and see a real blooded boxer in the person of George Carpenter, French idol and contender for the heavyweight crown, in the society drama, "The Wonder Man," which is being played at the Rialto theatre of the week. He is one boxer who does not run out of a fight. The bill also carries Lina Cavalieri in "Mad Love" and the usual week-end attractions.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

"Kismet," the big photoplay starring the inevitable character actor, Gus Skinner, in his first screen debut, will be the featured attraction for the entire week. This production is acclaimed as the greatest of the decade and from all reports it is living up to its reputation. People with interesting characterizations and situations, the story gave Gus Skinner his greatest starring vehicle on the legitimate stage. The scene of the story is laid in the ancient city of Bagdad and so great are the magnificent settings that it is a question if Bagdad could rival them. Gus Skinner plays the role of Hajj, a Persian, the same role as he played in the big hit of the production, and he continues his previous performance. "Kismet" is now playing at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, at $1.00 and 15 cents. Four prices on this big photoplay will be noticed and evening, 20c and 15c.

Costa Rica Looks to League Council

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, March 3.—Costa Rica will rely upon the council of the League of Nations for a solution of the controversy which has brought this country and Panama to the verge of war. The government has indicated that it will not welcome arbitration from another source, declaring that Panama has not complied with decisions handed down by President Loubet of France and Chief Justice White of the United States, who passed on the merits of the controversy several years ago. Reports reaching this city from the frontier state that several Costa Rican soldiers have been killed or gravely wounded and that Col. Obregon, commander of Costa Rican troops at Coto, is among those injured. Many volunteers for military service have registered for the army, as the hostile acts by Panama have been taken as a declaration of war. Assertion is made that Coto is on the Costa Rican side of the frontier, and that, in occupying the place, Panaman troops have invaded Costa Rican territory.

Would-Be Safe Crackers Caught In Act

BOSTON, March 4.—An attempt at safe-cracking was surprised early today by police in the South Boston district who captured three men after an exchange of shots in the office of Sumner Crosby & Son, Inc. Thomas Logan, one of the men captured was shot in the left leg and taken to a hospital, two confederates of those caught who apparently had laid low during the gun battle sallied out half an hour later, were seen and pursued, but evaded the shots that were fired and escaped. Three policemen were passing the Crosby grain store when through the dim light they saw men attacking the safe with a pickaxe. The officers rushed in, the cracksmen gave battle, and shots were fired by both. Only one bullet found a mark, that in Logan's leg. He went down and his two companions were overpowered. They gave their names as Vincent Courtney and Nicholas McCann.

Brother of Late Mayor McSwiney Jailed

CORK, March 4.—John (Sean) MacSwiney, brother of the former lord mayor of Cork, was one of 10 men who were sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment here today for waging war against crown forces, being in possession of arms, ammunition and explosives. Another accused man was sentenced to 10 years' penal servitude.

Look at Child's tongue

Give "California Syrup of Figs" only—Say "California"

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. Give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated, indigestion, undigested food and sour bile gently pass without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless laxative, because it never fails. Children dearly love its delicious, "fruity" taste. Full directions for babies and for children of all ages printed on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits! Mother, you must say "California." If you don't say "California" you may get an imitation that will not give you the same results. Advt.

INCREASE IN PAY

Slowey Advocates Increase for Register of Deeds

(Special to The Sun)
STATE HOUSE, Boston, March 4.—Representative Charles H. Slowey appeared before the legislative committee on public service to advocate a small increase in pay for Register of Deeds William C. Purcell.

The proposed increase, he said, merely places Register Purcell on an equality with other registers who are doing the same amount of work. He declared that every attorney who comes into contact with the office of the register would be willing to request to testify to the ability of Mr. Purcell and in the justice of the proposed increase. There was no opposition.

During the absence of Speaker Young at the inauguration ceremonies in Washington, Rep. Victor F. Jewett of Lowell is presiding over the sessions of the house.

Adverse reports were filed in the legislature on the following measures:

Bill providing that in the event of a total loss by fire, the full amount of any insurance policy shall be paid.

Resolve providing for an investigation by a special commission of the rates charged in this state for fire insurance.

Bill authorizing the department of public works to keep certain highways on main through routes open for travel in the winter months.

Bill providing that the "Star Spangled Banner" shall be sung in every public school once each week.

Bill permitting cities and towns to retain the fines received for violations of the motor vehicle laws.

Bill providing for draftees who were discharged from service within thirty days after reporting at a draft camp be paid a bonus of $50.

Bill prohibiting the giving of tips or gratuities to employees of hotels, restaurants, barber shops or other public places.

The house accepted adverse committee reports on these measures:

Bill repealing the law providing that when a strike is in progress, advertisements for help in the plant shall so state.

Bill providing for the establishment of a court of industrial relations to prevent strikes on public utilities.

Bill permitting the use of armories for athletic contests of high schools.

Bill to regulate the charges which may be made by hotels and restaurants for food.

Build Navy Second to None, Daniels Urges Harding

BY H. B. HUNT
WASHINGTON, March 2.—"There are just two courses open to the United States with reference to her naval program."
"First: To secure an international agreement with all great nations ending competition in navy building."
"Second: To build a navy strong enough and powerful enough to be able of ourselves to protect American interests and defend American policies in our distant possessions as well as at home."
Such is the conclusion of Secretary of Navy Daniels after eight years at the head of Uncle Sam's naval organization. Daniels ventures a word of advice to President-elect Harding: "Some plan should be adopted immediately to secure an agreement for a reduction of armaments."
"But until such an agreement is reached, let there be no cessation in naval expansion and development until the American navy is second to none on the high seas."
"Equality with the greatest or an international agreement alone can be seriously considered."
In explaining the advice he volunteers to the incoming administration, Daniels adds:
"There is an alternative to these two courses. I dismiss it as impossible—as a course which no American president or American congress would ever approve. That is to be content with a small navy in a world of big navies, exposed to certain destruction in case of war with a great power or powers."
"To spend money on an agency of war which would be helpless if needed would be sheer waste."
"Aside from mere ability to meet a possible enemy on even terms in actual combat, what considerations make a big navy so imperative for the United States?" Daniels was asked.
"President Wilson" was the secretary's reply. "In his address at St. Louis, in February, 1916, said: 'There is no other navy in the world that has to cover so large an area of defense as the American navy.' For that reason, he declared, we ought to have 'incomparably the most adequate navy in the world.'"
"That is the ideal toward which we have been working, and attainment is now in sight."
"Relatively, where does the present building program approved by congress place our navy?"
"With respect to the British navy, the present program, authorized and projected, will give us in major classes and in great gun power a force superior to theirs; in total tonnage and effective fighting ships, we would be approximately equal. In light cruisers and other ships used for protecting the main body of the fleet and in conducting blockading operations we will be considerably weaker."
"We will be slightly inferior in submarines and will have no modern aircraft carriers suitable for operating with the fleet."
"The lack of aviation forces will place us at a disadvantage in comparison with Great Britain."
"In comparison with the Japanese, our program, if carried through, will make us superior, in the total tonnage of effective ships at the ratio of 2 1/2 to 1. Should Japan build the vessels she has projected, but not authorized, the ratio would be 1 1/2 to 1 in favor of the United States. We will be superior in total ships, destroyers and submarines.

"Japan will be superior in battle cruisers and light cruisers."
"In your judgment, does the heavily armored, big-gun ship still constitute the backbone of a modern navy, or has it been made obsolete by aviation?" he was asked.
"It is quite possible that the torpedo airplane will become an effective instrument in naval warfare. But that does not mean they will drive the battleship off the sea."
"Experience has demonstrated that the battleship with heavy guns, heavy armor and proper protection against torpedoes holds the balance of power in a naval battle."
"But in naval war, as a whole, all the other craft have their own uses and they must be included in the equipment of a navy which can be relied upon to win the victory over any possible enemy."
"If the United States takes a stand with other countries in an agreement to limit armaments and to promote peace, our present navy will be adequate for our defense and the prevention of aggression. But if we are to stand alone we must be prepared to defend our interests against any possible opposition or combination."
"This means a continuance of naval construction indefinitely, however costly that may be."

INAUGURAL BULLETINS

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Vice President Coolidge took the oath at 12:21 p. m.
WASHINGTON, March 4.—The 66th congress adjourned sine die at 12:49 p. m., the clock having been set back in the senate.
WASHINGTON, March 4.—On motion of Senator Lodge the senate today confirmed the nomination of Norman H. Davis, retiring under secretary of state, to be the American representative on the international communications conference.
The senate also confirmed the nominations of William H. Williams, assistant secretary of war, and Gordon Woodbury, assistant secretary of the navy.
WASHINGTON, March 4.—The president also gave a "pocket veto" to the immigration restriction bill.

BIRTHDAY PARTY
At the home of Mr. Frank Cassie, 105 Pare avenue, Dracut, last night, a very enjoyable birthday party was held in honor of Miss Alice Cassie's fifteenth birthday. There was a large number of friends of the little girl present and the entertainment program carried out was thoroughly appreciated. Miss Alice Allard and Mr. Thomas Vickers gave an exhibition dance and Mr. Ernest Guenard a violin solo, both of which were well received. A quartet composed of Messrs. Cassie, Guenard, Stockton and H. Guenard contributed several pleasing selections. The Misses Cassie and Mikalis participated in an appropriate dialogue. At the close of the entertainment a very hearty lunch was served by Mrs. Cassie. Dancing was enjoyed throughout the evening.

Harding Thanks Mr. Wilson

Continued
The machine swung swiftly over the same course to the White House. It followed on the way down, Mr. Wilson talking with Mrs. Wilson as it moved along. When it turned into the avenue to pass the White House, he was looking to the right and gave not a glance in passing at the building where he had lived eight years.
Plain Woodrow Wilson
The car turned up Jackson place and into 17th street and as it approached the S street house a group of several hundred people were gathered and cheered to Mr. Wilson's smiling greeting. He went in at once to find a score of intimate friends waiting him and then stood on the second floor with Mrs. Wilson to shake hands with the newspapermen of his party. He seemed cheerful and showed no indication of fatigue from his trip.
Later in the day he was to be accorded a reception at his home by League of Nations advocates.
After Mr. Wilson reached his home, Admiral Grayson, who accompanied him from the capital, addressed him as "Mr. President."
"No," Mr. Wilson interrupted, smiling. "Call me Woodrow Wilson, now."
When Mr. Wilson departed from the White House, it was necessary for secret service men to place 3 1/2 feet on each succeeding step as he descended and it was apparent to all that it was next to impossible for him to take part in the ceremonies at the capital.
He had been warned that he would do so at the risk of losing all the cash he has made toward health. If not indeed his life. Persistent at first, he yielded at last and quit the capital before the inaugural ceremonies actually had begun.
SHIP MAY BE TOTAL LOSS
BOSTON, March 4.—The wrecking and probable total loss of the four-masted schooner Anna Laura McKenney of this port at Puerto Mexico, was announced in a cablegram to her owners by Captain Davis today. She had 1500 tons of coal, which, vessel and cargo were valued at about $150,000. The fact that the crew were not mentioned is taken by the owners as indicating that all were saved.

BRIAND PAYS TRIBUTE TO WOODROW WILSON

LONDON, March 4.—M. Briand, the French premier, commenting on the retirement of Woodrow Wilson from the presidency, said today:
"France will cherish eternal gratitude to the United States for having so powerfully contributed to the victory of right and justice in the world. The name of the eminent statesman who took the responsibility for the intervention of America in the great war is inseparable from the victory and will remain equally engraved upon French hearts."
"We know the generous idealism which animated the American policy and which has always inspired the high personages called to the supreme magistracy. I know that President Harding will be for the sister republic friend as sure as large in spirit and as devoted to the triumph of right as his illustrious predecessor."

NEW VICE PRESIDENT

Wilson Again Private Citizen

Coolidge First From Massachusetts Since Wilson Served With Grant

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Calvin Coolidge is the first Massachusetts man to hold the office of vice-president since Henry Wilson served in the second Grant administration nearly half a century ago. His advent into office adds to the prominence of his state in national government affairs for it is regarded as almost certain that Senator Henry Cabot Lodge will be again chosen as republican leader in the senate, and Rep. Frederick D. Gillett as speaker of the house.

Should Mr. Gillett succeed himself, a Massachusetts man will preside over each branch of congress, a most unusual coincidence. More unusual still is the fact that both Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Gillett come from the same congressional district, Northampton, the home of the vice-president being in the same district as Springfield, the home of the speaker. Both men are graduates of Amherst college.

Vice-President Coolidge is entering upon his first service in the field of national politics, but for 20 years he has been active in the political service of his state, rising from membership in the council of his city to governor of the commonwealth.

In some respects Mr. Coolidge is a figure strange in American public life, being taciturn to a degree and appearing shunning the spot light and the clamor which usually surrounds high public officials. To his most intimate friends he is known as "Stent Cal." It is related in illustration of this characteristic that a personal and political friend who had conferred with him in his executive offices at Boston without receiving more than monosyllabic answers finally quit the office in disgust, exclaiming as he came out: "By George, I'd like to be that fellow's stenographer."

But after all, holding public office comes naturally enough to the new vice-president. For generations, ever since his forebears settled in Watertown, Mass., in 1630 and later went to the rough, backwoods section of the state, where he was born on Independence day, 1872, his family has been identified with public affairs. His father served in the Vermont state legislature and on governors' staffs and for years has been known as a sort of unofficial magistrate and counselor in his section. It was the crowning event of the father's life to witness today the inauguration of his son.

By intellectual preference Vice-President Coolidge has since early youth demonstrated a taste for problems of statecraft. As a senior at Amherst, he won the $50 gold medal in competition with students of all American colleges for the best essay on an historical subject, which in his case was "The Principles of the American Revolution." Burke and other political leaders of intellectual distinction have always been his favorites and he has studied carefully their writings.

It was this intensive study of affairs of state that first attracted to him the attention of prominent republican leaders notably the late Senator Wm. Murray Crane of Massachusetts. For a number of years these leaders had been directing him into the national political arena. Their opportunity came when the spectacular Boston police strike, during his first term as governor, attracted nation-wide attention.

The crisis which was precipitated by the strike, according to these friends, merely revealed the powers and courage of the man, and they frankly and openly seized the opportunity to press for him claims for the republican presidential nomination at Chicago last June. They pointed out that as counselor in his home city and later as city solicitor and mayor, as a member of both branches of the legislature including a term as president-governor and finally as lieutenant-governor and finally as governor he had been elected with ever increasing majorities culminating in the vote of confidence after the police strike when he was again elected governor by a plurality of 126,000.

Probably the most attractive part of Mr. Coolidge is his home life. Ever since his marriage, 15 years ago, to Miss Grace Coolidge, of Burlington, Vt., a University of Vermont graduate, whom he met as a school teacher in Northampton, he has lived a quiet, modest life, most of the time in the shadow of Smith college in a house which he has rented for $32.50 a month. "Save, no matter what your salary may be," has always been the motto, and as he has enjoyed beyond the income earned in public office only meagre returns from his law practice, he has been obliged and content to live simply. There are two boys in their early teens, but all do their bit, even to mowing the lawn.

probably pursue, in some unannounced way, his work for world peace. It was thought too, that the outgoing president would take up the business of literature where he left off when he quit the presidency of Princeton university to enter politics and become governor of New Jersey.

Frail in health with his body racked by 18 months of illness it had been supposed by Mr. Wilson's closest friends that he planned nothing else than rest. But, Rear Admiral Grayson, his personal physician, says he is able to take up legal work and could even possibly appear occasionally before the supreme court of the United States to which the retiring president will make application for admission to practice.

The second democratic president since Andrew Jackson to fill two successive terms, Mr. Wilson's eight years in the White House carried him through the range of human emotions. He was almost blindly idolized and cordially hated. Profound peace, the most terrible of wars, death of a wife and help-me, courtship and marriage and finally lingering illness all came in turn to brighten or darken his days. Eight years of it whitened his hair, racked his frame and impaired his physical vigor, but did not rust his mind.

Characterized by his friends as much a wounded veteran of the world war as if he had been shot in battle, he goes back to private life today regarded by his partisans as a living sacrifice to his ideals.

Woodrow Wilson was not a well man when he took up the presidency. He was decidedly a sick man. He was threatened with Bright's disease, which physicians diagnosed as having been brought about by a particular treatment for frequent head colds to which he and the first Mrs. Wilson were subject. The wife died soon after, but his case yielded to care.

Some years before that, Mr. Wilson had suffered a thrombosis, in one of his legs. It was the lodging of a blood clot in an artery, but because of its location not serious. It was, however, a complication of the same nature which caused his breakdown in 1915, when the clot formed on the right side of his brain, impairing the control of his left arm and leg.

Almost Sightless in One Eye

Little known also, is the fact that Mr. Wilson, like Mr. Roosevelt, was practically sightless in one of his eyes. Bursting blood vessels in the retina practically made it useless, although the impairment was in part overcome by the use of eye glasses. He suffered also from nervous indigestion. With a predisposition to take cold easily added to this list of troubles, Woodrow Wilson took up the arduous duties of the presidency with far less physical equipment than the public generally gave him credit for.

Once in office the round of complexities which brought Mr. Wilson praise on one side and denunciation on the other was not long in starting and like a snowball rolling down hill, continued to take on volume until the day of his departure from the White House.

Once, in the midst of his siege of preparation which accompanied the first stages of his present illness, he debated with himself whether he ought not to relinquish his office and give way to a successor. Later when health had improved and the democratic convention at San Francisco was balloting night and day to agree on a presidential nominee, Mr. Wilson debated with himself whether he should be a candidate for a third term. It could not be said that either subject reached the stage of "being considered." But it is known that Mr. Wilson gave the subject some thought.

These with many other things form the highly interesting unwritten chapters of Woodrow Wilson's life. They would make a volume of far more engrossing reading than anything that ever had been written about him.

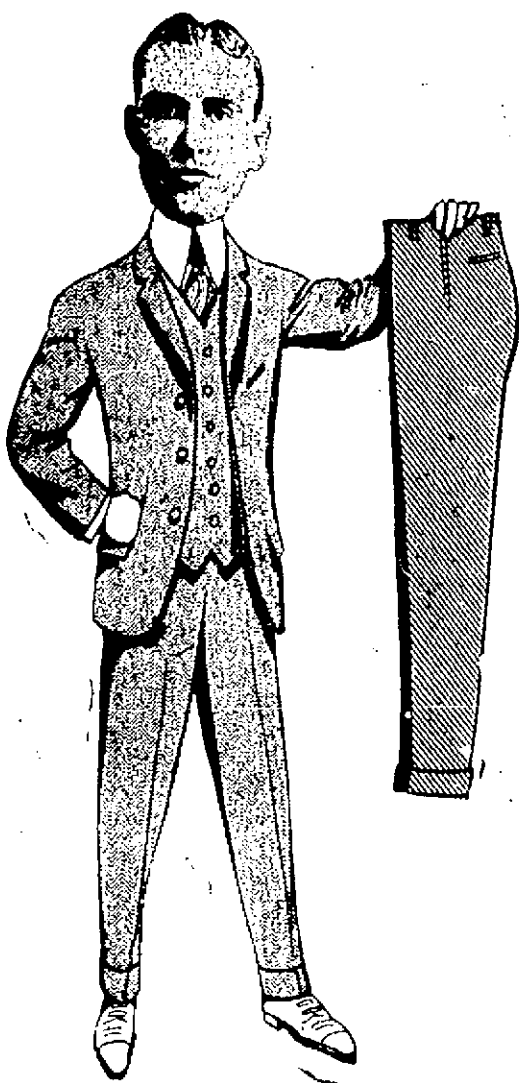

Blithe Disclosure Break

Such a volume might include the "inside" story of the break with Colonel House, his former confidential adviser; it might tell how Mr. Wilson roused Mr. Clemenceau, the French premier, from bed at 2 o'clock in the morning, practically charged the French delegates with tampering with proceedings.

It might tell how Mr. Wilson made up his mind to "fire" some other cabinet officers soon after the resignation of Secretary Lansing, but desisted because, he said, it would only add to the popular impression that he "couldn't get along with anybody."

LAST CALL

Positively the Final Week of My Twelfth Anniversary Sale

At 9.30 tomorrow night the curtain goes down on the most successful tailoring event staged in New England.

When this sale ends more than 3000 yards of fine custom tailored woolens will be disposed of at less than weavers' cost.

There never has been a sale to equal this one held in any Lowell store.

And there never can be—unless some merchant is willing to sacrifice all his retail profit and induce the wholesaler and mill man to part with a good share of theirs.

1000 buyers have attended this sale in the past week—a testimonial to the alert trading judgment of Lowell clothing buyers.

Yet don't think that all of the best selections are gone. That's not so. The yardage is small—that is true—but it's sufficient to take care of two more days of record-breaking business.

The curtain is still up—and it will remain so until the old tower clock on City Hall sounds the curfew hour of this sale at 9.30 Saturday night next.

P.S.—EASTER SUNDAY ONLY FOUR WEEKS AWAY

Among the most attractive offerings of this sale is a 14-ounce All Wool Blue Serge Worsted, made by the Lymansville mill of Rhode Island. These goods are sold in stores today at from $30.00 to $37.50 for a suit. My price during this sale, suit to order, $25.00, and

"said with a smile" to Lloyd George concerning the relative strengths of the British and American navies, and it might disclose that Mr. Wilson went to the peace conference prepared to withdraw, as he threatened to do, in its midst.

All these things, however, if they do become public, probably will do so by the pen of the historian after Woodrow Wilson has been assigned to his proper niche in the wall of history. While the principal actors in that series of dramas live, all these things are likely to remain behind the scenes. Mr. Wilson's retirement to private life is not likely to release them for public consumption.

Moral Leader of the World

Until the beginning of the world war Mr. Wilson held the attention of the country with his swift strokes at getting legislation from congress. With the coming of the war he devoted the last two years of his first term to an attempt to keep the United States out of the conflict, and as the seemingly inevitable drift toward war set in, he gradually assumed the diplomatic leadership of the nations arrayed against Germany and her allies, and finally assumed what his partisans characterized as the moral leadership of the world.

During the diplomatic correspondence with Germany he displayed many hourly human emotions.

On May 7, 1918, when Mr. Wilson heard the news of the sinking of the Lusitania, he was almost at the end of his patience. Like a man making a last effort to avoid a quarrel with a wife who has just laid on the last straw, he clapped on his hat and went out and walked around the block. He knew how to give vent to his emotions on other occasions and has been known to say something stronger than the "sit-lut" which has been accredited to him on having made a face pass of golf. However, cold and austere he may have been accounted in his dealings with public men, these who have been privileged to view his family life from the inside of the circle testify that he is intensely human.

To Remain in Washington

What part he may take in public affairs in the future, living as he will almost under the shadow of the dome, let the capitol, its laws, its lively legislation. So far as the records show, no other president has remained in Washington after going out of office. Mr. Wilson first intended to live in Baltimore. He and the present Mrs. Wilson settled it, by playing a game the president invented during an idle hour on the steamer George Washington on one of the trips to and from the peace conference. It was a game of percentages with certain scores allotted to the various advantages or disadvantages of life of which both were most fond. Baltimore, as the game worked out, had the highest. But breakdown and continued illness intervened and it was decided to remain in Washington, where almost all of Mrs. Wilson's family reside.

The new home, bought recently, is on an elevation in the northwest residence section not far from a site long held by the imperial German government for embassy. Mr. Wilson expects to spend the future almost on the spot where the kaiser expected his ambassador to sit.

Because of the secrecy which has been thrown around his physical condition, the country is probably most interested in that just now. Mr. Wilson is convalescent—so far as nature permits—from what medically is called thrombosis—a blood clot in one of the arteries on the right side of his brain which impairs the motor nerves in the left arm and leg. He can walk short distances alone with the aid of a cane, longer distances require the use of a wheel chair. Walking up and down stairs is a precarious experiment seldom attempted.

Stricken While Alone

Mr. Wilson was not stricken on the League of Nations speaking trip in the west as is popularly supposed, but within a week after he returned to the White House. Warning signals of the coming attack were what caused his return. For three days after he came back he seemed to be improving. In fact he took a motor ride the day before he was laid low and on the night before he played billiards. The seizure came in the night, at an hour when the president was alone, and he was found stricken just before daylight.

For a week his life was despaired of, but his real condition was kept secret by his family. Then came a turn for the better and for many weeks the president was confined to his bed—a bed in which Abraham Lincoln before him probably had passed many a night of pain and sleeplessness of a different nature. Even the White House kitchen was not admitted to the room, and Mr. Wilson, usually clean shaven, grew a beard and a do-do beardous remarks to his physicians and family as he brushed it for amusement several times a day.

Just Escaped Operation

In the midst of the terror on his looked for muscular complication set in and refused to yield to treatment. While physicians and surgeons anxiously consulted downstairs as to whether the president's pay could stand the shock of a surgical operation and had about decided that was a life or death chance, a nurse arrived with the news that nature had intervened and that the operation would be unnecessary. From that moment slow recovery set in.

Motor nerves which had refused to respond to needle pricks showed signs of reaction. Pretty soon Mr. Wilson was about in a wheel chair. A few weeks later he was learning to walk again with the support of an attendant. Massage, electricity and everything known to science were employed to coax his muscular faculties back into action. Then he got out-of-doors for motor rides and received some visitors. He took up a routine of a few hours' work each day dictating to stenographers and increased the time as strength gathered.

One evening he surprised Washington by going to the theatre walking only with the aid of a cane which he humorously called "my third leg." He probably never will play golf again and may never deliver another public speech, although he will write what he has to say, in what extended measure no one knows. His friends say it may be a large one.

Washington will now have a president and one of the two living ex-presidents on its hands and officialdom is very much interested to see how it will work out.

129 LEAVE CONGRESS
Members of Senate and House Retired Today to Private Life.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—One hundred and twenty-nine members of the house and senate retired today to private life. Most of them went out in the back wash from the total wave which swept the republican party into full control of all the functions of the government, but some few, republicans as well as democrats, elected not to run again for their seats.

One or two of the republicans may become officials in the Harding administration, but the great majority will know public life no more for two years, at least, and many for a longer period, if ever.

Champ Clark, one of those who would have retired today, was claimed by death two days before the session ended. A picture of Clark, who was the outgoing member as senator from Missouri, who did not offer himself for re-election.

The actual number of house members retiring was 118, but three of these—McKinley of Illinois, Harrell of Oklahoma, and Caraway of Arkansas, democrat, go to the other end of the Capitol as senators. McKinley's house record was 11 years.

The political landslide of Nov. 2 gave the republicans a much larger working majority in the house—two-thirds in the opinion of some leaders. The extra session expected to be called soon will start with 391 republicans, 123 democrats and one socialist. The lone prohibitionist in the closing congress under which the country went dry was beaten. There is one man shy from Pennsylvania-at-large. The republican vacancy caused by the death of the member-elect will not be filled until fall.

The new senate, which convened today in special session to act on nominations by President Harding, contains 39 republicans and 37 democrats, giving the republicans a majority of 22 as against only two majority during most of the last congress, when the house generally was 19 republicans and 47 democrats. The seating of two republicans in January in place of democrats gave the former a slightly larger working margin during the last few weeks.

For the second time in history the house will have a woman member, Miss Alice M. Robertson, of the second Oklahoma district, who succeeds William W. Hastings.

For the first time in the history of the house the territory east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio rivers will dominate legislation, receiving control and strong enough to overcome all combinations of republicans and democrats from the south and west.

Many places formerly held by veterans were captured by open young in years and politics, but some veteran politicians came in, among them Theodore Burton of Ohio, a former senator, and Burke Cockran of New York.

The late Champ Clark is to be succeeded by a man new in congress. Although his service was not continuous, Mr. Clark's total time was 25 years, running third in that respect to Cannon and Speaker Gillett. Two Tennessee democrats—Stans and Moon—turned over their desks to younger men after coming here together 24 years ago.

Two leading democrats on the ways and means committee, which must frame a tariff law, Henry T. Rainey of Illinois and Hull of Tennessee—marched out, Rainey after 18 years and Hull 14. Sherwood of Ohio, who went into the army as a private and came out a brigadier general, retired with 16 years marked on his legislative gun, the same mark set by Gold-fogle of New York, whose place was taken by Meyer London, the only socialist winner in November. Other prominent democrats retiring were Scott Ferris, Oklahoma, and Lee, Texas, brother-in-law of the retiring postmaster general, Harrison.

The delegations from 14 states, many of them with small representation, remained unchanged. Gallivan and Tagne, both of Boston, stood up as the sole and solid democratic representation from all of New England. Ohio, the state of presidential nominees, sent a solid republican delegation.

Thus far there have been no indications of a determined fight to elect Speaker Gillett, or the republican leader, Mondell. Kitchin, long ill and absent, is slated for democratic leader, the job he held while Clark was speaker.

Prominent among the 12 democratic and two republican members retiring today besides Senator Sherman were Senators Chamberlain, Oregon, former democratic chairman of the military committee; Cronin, North Dakota, former republican chairman of the agri-

HER IMPROVEMENT
TALK OF FRIENDS

Lowell Woman Gains in Strength and Never Feels Tired Any More
Since Taking Tanlac, She Says

"Tanlac has helped me so much that all my friends are talking about the improvement in my condition," said Mrs. A. J. Parade, 210 Hildreth St., Lowell, recently.

"At the time I began taking it my system seemed to be in an awful run-down condition. I had lost considerable weight, and was so weak the least bit of housework was an effort to me. I had that tired, worn-out feeling all the time, and my face was so pale I didn't look at all like myself. My back ached just like toothache, and worried me all the time."

"But Tanlac certainly has made me feel like a different person. I have gained in weight and strength until I feel better than I have in a long time, and never feel tired and run-down any more. My color has come back, too, and my back never hurts like it used to. In fact, I wouldn't take anything on earth for what Tanlac has done for me."

Tanlac is sold in Lowell by Green's Drug Store, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative, Dr. William Drugg, Jr., Rutherford, Mass., and is the leading druggist in every town.—Adv.

Other retiring members were Beck-ham, Kentucky; Gay, Louisiana; Johnson, South Dakota; Kirby, Arkansas; Henderson, Nevada; Smith, Arizona; Smith, Maryland; and Phelan, California, all democrats.

Another retiring notable was Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall, who will go on Chautauqua circuits next week. He will sail for Europe in May to remain until fall.

Of the 14 new senators who took their seats today, 11 were republicans and three democrats. The republicans were: Ralph H. Cameron, Arizona; Samuel M. McPherson, California; Samuel D. Nicholson, Colorado; William B. McKinley, Illinois; Richard P. Ernst, Kentucky; Ovington E. Weller, Maryland; former Governor Tasker L. Odle, Nevada; R. P. Ladd, North Dakota; former Rep. J. W. Harrell, Oklahoma; Robert N. Stansfield, Oregon; and former Governor Peter Norbeck, South Dakota. The democrats were: Former Rep. T. H. Caraway, Arkansas; Thomas B. Watson, Georgia, and Edwin S. Broussard, Louisiana.

SKETCH OF PRESIDENT
WARREN G. HARDING

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Whatever else he may be, Warren G. Harding, always classifies himself as an editor, publisher and printer, proud of his professional accomplishments and training. His look, charm and mustache suggest a printer's rule, carried in his pocket wherever he goes; and his close friends say he would rather set a stick of type any day than grant an audience to an ambassador.

For more than thirty years Mr. Harding's bread and butter has been earned by the Marion Star, whose responsibilities he assumed under heavy mortgage and whose early years he nourished at the expense of going hungry more than once himself. Since his nomination for the presidency he has faced only one public ordeal that aroused emotions he could not master. That was the temporary severance of the ties that bind him to the Star. On election night, when a group of his employees came to congratulate him, his voice broke and his big frame was shaken by sobs when he undertook to speak of the separation that must be the price of his triumph.

Election day was Mr. Harding's fifty-fifth birthday, and all the interests of his lifetime had been rooted in the immediate vicinity of Marion. He was born at Blooming Grove, O., in an adjoining county, the son of a country doctor, George T. Harding, who still visits his patients about Marion in the one-horse carriage of the old school practitioner. The new president's mother has been dead for many years and his father is remarried.

Young Harding attended college at Oberlin, O., and then tried school teaching for a year before he began his newspaper career. Always a partisan and a republican, he lost his job as a reporter by writing in the presence of his democratic editor a "blaine hat."

the stove-pipe which was a badge of support of James G. Blaine.

Although it was a pioneer newspaper, Mr. Harding's mind ran to progressive notions even in the day when the star still was a liability. He broke with his first partner over the question of installing a telephone in the newspaper office, a proposal which the partner held to be impractical, extravagant and revolutionary. Although he retains a controlling financial interest in the Star, now a successful newspaper, Mr. Harding will occupy but a titular relationship to it during his presidency.

Three times before he has held public office. He served in the Ohio legislature and as lieutenant governor of his state, and six years ago he was elected to the United States senate where he became a member of the foreign relations committee. In 1918 he was chairman of the Republican national convention.

In personal appearance the new president is a man to attract a second look in any crowd. He carries his two hundred and ten pounds without a hint of obesity, although he is not quite six feet tall; and his massive features round out an impression of force and distinction. His hair is iron grey—almost silver grey—making sharp contrast with the unusually heavy black eyebrows that almost mask a pair of calm grey eyes. It is only in repose that his face takes on the aspect of severity seen so often in his photographs. When he talks or listens the lines are broken by a smile that radiates cordiality.

President Harding walks slowly, talks slowly and makes up his mind slowly; but he gives the impression of polished deliberation rather than of over-caution or abatement. He is a good conversationalist and a good listener, and has a faculty of getting through embarrassing situations with little show of embarrassment.

As an orator Mr. Harding never has rated himself as witty or eloquent, though he attained considerable success a few years ago on the Chautauqua platform. He seldom attempts fine word pictures or humorous passages, but cultivates a deliberate, unembellished utterance.

He never gives the impression of stilted dignity. He likes to know just well enough to call them by their first names and to slap them on the back when he meets them. He likes to shake hands and make conversation about the weather and the crops, and when he does he usually lapses into the vernacular of an Ohio countryman.

It is Mr. Harding's affability that has made for officials close to him some of their hardest problems. He never likes to refuse an audience or to terminate a conference until his visitor has talked himself out. On his first campaign trip his managers ruled that time and endurance would not permit him to appear at wayside stations, but after the train had whizzed past the first waiting crowd he ordered that a stop be made wherever the people had come out expecting to see him.

The new president is unusually fond of children, though he has none of his own. He is a life-long Baptist and a trustee of his home church in Marion. He has been a member of the Elk and Moose fraternities for years, and since his election to the presidency has become a 22d degree Mason and a Shriner. Golf is his favorite recreation and he likes to fish but does not hunt. He plays hard and necessities the faculty of putting all his worries out of his mind during vacation hours.

Of all the presidents, Mr. Harding's close friends liken him most often to McKinley, with whom he has in common a predominant passion for obliteration of class and sectional lines.

Problems Facing the New Administration

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Here are some of the more important of the problems, international and domestic, facing the Harding administration:

International:—Peace with Germany. Final disposition of the treaties of Versailles and St. Germain. Decision as to the entry of the United States into an Association of Nations.

International disarmament. The Japanese-California question. The Russian question, including trade with Soviet Russia. Recognition of Mexico.

Negotiation of new treaties, diplomatic and commercial, with Germany and Austria and with the new nations, Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia. Japanese occupation of Siberia. Treaty with Colombia.

Disposition of the former German cables now held by the allies. Recognition of the new Greek government and settlement of the status of the Greek loan.

Loans to allied countries, including funding of the British and other debts to the United States.

The Anglo-French world oil agreement of San Remo. Cuban relations. Military occupation of Haiti and Dominican Republic.

Irish question. Philippines independence. Self-government for Porto Rico.

Settlement of claims against Germany resulting from revolutions there. Re-establishment of full diplomatic relations with Turkey.

Disposition of the Anglo-French-American treaty for defense of France. Domestic:—Tax and tariff revision.

Soldiers' bonus. Panama Canal tolls. Immigration control. General labor policy. Army and navy policies. Permanent merchant marine policy. Reorganization of government departments.

Budget system. Civil Service reform. Strengthening of prohibition laws. Anti-trust law revision. Disposition of enemy property seized during the war.

General reconstruction legislation—housing, farmer credits, railroad law revision and coal and packer control.

FRED HOWARD, THE DRUGGIST

FIRST LADY OF LAND

Mrs. Harding Possesses Unusual Degree of Pluck and Outspokenness

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Florence Kling Harding, the new First Lady of the land, possesses an unusual degree of pluck and outspokenness. She has ideas of her own on many subjects and who does not hesitate to speak her opinions straight out from the shoulder. Those who work for her count her a kindly and delightful mistress, but they know that any delinquency will call down a reprimand they will not soon forget. On occasions she has been seen shaking a forefinger at her husband—but of course nobody knows what that all is about.

All her life Mrs. Harding has been a determined and tireless worker, not only in the details of her household, but in the broader field of business and community welfare. She comes of fighting blood, her father, Amos Kling, has been a rugged power of the pioneer days of Marion. She was born there, and although in her girlhood her parents attained to moderate means they were not the sort who lean to extravagance.

When she married Mr. Harding in 1891, his newspaper, the Star, was not yet out of the woods financially and she went to work in its business department. She applied herself to advertising and circulation problems with an eye for efficiency all along the line. She watched the original purchases of print paper and materials, and she stood at the presses and gave instructions to the newsboys daily before they started on their rounds with the finished product.

It is said of her in Marion that when she became the wife of the struggling young editor she told her friends she expected to make him president some day, and it is known that at some of the most discouraging stages of the pre-convention campaign last year it was she who insisted most vigorously that the fight be continued.

During the strenuous days when thousands were marching to the front porch of the Harding residence on Mt. Vernon avenue she was the most active figure about her husband's headquarters. She was beside him every time he spoke at home or away; she shook hands with as many men and women as did he; and she was in and out of his offices from morning until night, rounding up details and giving him advice on all serious questions before him.

Late on the night of the last front porch meeting a newspaperman passing the Harding home saw someone moving about the dark recesses of the big veranda. It was Mrs. Harding, drawing her porch chairs back against the wall for the night and softly whistling a quiet little air of contentment. "You seem happy enough," he called across to her.

"I surely am," she replied, "and why shouldn't I be? Isn't it wonderful?"

Mrs. Harding is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and the Harding alternate attendance between that and the Baptist church, of which the new president is a member. She loves children and chooses horses and dogs for her pets. Cruel treatment of dumb animals arouses her to militant protests, and on more than one occasion she has stopped on the streets of Marion and Washington to reprimand a drayman or a cabby for abusing his horse. In her younger days she was a skilled horsewoman.

Of medium height, the new First Lady carries herself erect and with a charming dignity. Pictures seldom do her justice, for although her hair is streaked with silver her eyes are as bright and her glances and smiles as radiant as when she was sixteen.

Review of the 66th Congress

war after President Wilson had appealed to the country in 1915 to return a democratic majority to congress, the republicans organized all committees at the opening session in 1919 and immediately launched an attack on the administration. This centered around the treaty of Versailles, which was taken up in the senate before it was signed at Paris.

Other acts of the administration which came in for criticism included the sending of troops to Russia, the handling of deportation cases and the winding up of war contracts. Investigations of many phases of war activities also were undertaken and continued through most of the nearly two years of life of this, the first republican congress in eight years.

Four votes of important measures by the president also were overridden by the sixty-sixth congress. The measures repassed after their disapproval by Mr. Wilson included the prohibition enforcement act and joint resolutions reducing the size of the regular army to 115,000 men, repealing the daylight savings law and reviving the war finance corporation. In the case of one important matter, the Knox resolution to declare the state of war with Germany at an end, the presidential veto stood.

Besides the war inquiries, many others were conducted, including those into the 1919 steel strike, the spread of radical propaganda, the coal and housing situations, the controversy between Secretary Daniels and Rear Admiral Sims over naval medal awards, campaign expenditures, shipping board operations, the Ford-Newberry election, radical deportation cases, and the escape to Germany of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, Philadelphia draft evader.

International disarmament was a subject occupying much attention at the closing session, inquiries being conducted by both house and senate committees. Final action was deferred to the whole question left over to the Harding administration. The senate naval committee recommended, however, that there be no halting of American naval program.

Important measures passed by the sixty-sixth congress, besides the prohibition enforcement law, the entrance amendment, and the resolution to revive the war finance corporation included.

The transportation act. The merchant marine act. The Edge bill for four per cent finance corporations.

The oil and gas leasing laws. The army reorganization act. The water power development bill. A bill abolishing the United States Housing corporations.

In addition the usual annual supply measures were put through and preliminary ground work was laid by the house of ways and means committee for revising both the tariff and tax laws.

There were three sessions of the sixty-sixth congress. The first, an extraordinary one called by President Wilson by cable from Paris after failure of some of the big appropriation measures in the preceding caucuses, met on May 15, 1919, and continued just six months to Nov. 12. The second session, a regular one, began on Dec. 1, 1919, and continued to June 5, 1920, ending just before the national political conventions. The third and final session began last Dec. 6, including the sessions during the war and earlier, congress has been sitting virtually in continuous session for a decade.

The Versailles treaty was the great bone of contention during both the first and second sessions. It was twice debated, first on Nov. 12, 1919, and again on March 19, 1920, when, by a vote of 47 to 37, it was returned to President Wilson. The Knox resolution to end the state of war with Germany then was adopted and, on May 27, 1920, killed by a presidential veto.

The treaty debate began May 22, 1919, four days after the new congress convened. The treaty was reported to the senate, with lodge reservations.

At the second session, bipartisan conferences of senate leaders failed to bring an agreement on reservations and, with debate renewed in February, 1920, the final vote on ratification March 12 was 49 to 35, less than the two-thirds majority. The national presidential conventions and the popular "isolism" referendum followed. No effort was made to obtain action on the treaty during the session which ended today.

The first session was signalized by efforts to deal with the high cost of living. At that session also congress conferred the permanent rank of general upon General Pershing. The day destined to pass bills giving Major General March, chief of staff, and Chandler, former provost marshal general, the rank of lieutenant general. Bills to give permanent rank of admiral to Rear Admirals Brown and Sims also failed.

Also during the first session, Allen Berger, the Wisconsin socialist, was unseated by the house and during the second session, he again was denied a seat after his reelection at a special election.

At the second session, the house passed bills to provide a bonus for war veterans and to amend the tariff and internal revenue laws. To abolish luxury and other taxes—but they failed in the senate, which at that session also rejected President Wilson's

PAPPAS THREATENED

Tells Court Suvolos Said,
"I'll Blow Off Your Feathers"

"I'll blow off your feathers," Harry Suvolos is charged with saying to Andrew Pappas, at the same time flourishing a revolver. When Suvolos appeared in the police court today on charges of threatening bodily harm, Pappas testified to the remark, which, he explained, means in plain English, "I'll blow off your brains." Pappas told of being on his way home from work with the defendant, who lives on the same street with him in Collinsville, when the latter began to call him names which he was "ashamed to express" before the court. "I walked away from him," said Pappas, "but he followed me." According to the witness, the defendant approached without warning, whereupon the latter's wife threw stones at him. Defendant then said the witness, repaired to his home and secured a revolver, which he proclaimed an intention of using. The defendant's wife, said Pappas, pleaded with him not to shoot, holding him with her arms around his neck. She also adjured Pappas and his wife, he said, to go into their house if they were Christians. Pappas also charged the defendant with threatening to burn his house and him with it.

Suvolos had a different version of things. According to his narration, he had trouble with Pappas some months ago, and since then the complainant and his wife have improved the occasions of his passing by their home to address remarks of a derogatory character to him. He was seeking an explanation of these verbal assaults, he said, when he was made a target for stones hurled by Mrs. Pappas. He denied wielding a revolver in a threatening manner, and placed the onus of the business on Mr. and Mrs. Pappas.

NO SEPARATE PARISH
IN PAWTUCKETVILLE

"There will be no new Catholic parish in Pawtucketville, not for the present, at least, according to an announcement by Cardinal O'Connell this week. The section of the district, which it was expected would be set apart as a French Catholic parish is to remain under the jurisdiction of the Oblate fathers of St. Joseph's.

According to present arrangements, masses will be celebrated in the new chapel on Fourth avenue by Oblate fathers every Sunday, beginning probably a week from next Sunday. It was expected that the church would be ready for services tomorrow, but the pastor of St. Joseph's, Rev. Eugene J. Turcotte, O.M.I., informed the Sun today that it will be impossible to celebrate mass there next Sunday, but if all is in readiness he expects the first service will be held a week from Sunday.

The movement for a new church for the French Catholics of Pawtucketville was started about eight years ago at which time a committee of prominent residents was appointed to take the necessary steps for the establishment of a parish in that district. Some time ago Rev. J. B. Labossiere, pastor of St. Louis' church was delegated by the cardinal to make a survey within the boundary lines of Pawtucketville and his report was to the effect that

THE "ETERNAL LIGHT"

The "Eternal Light," a photograph of the life of Our Saviour, to be presented at the Academy of Music on Boston street under the auspices of the C.Y.M. next Saturday promises to draw one of the largest audiences of the season. Already the capacity for two performances has been sold and the boys are working on the third for the remainder of the week. The children will witness the marvelous picture in the morning at 10 o'clock, and invitations are extended to the various orphanages of the city in order that the children of these institutions may have an opportunity likewise to see the picture. The performance for the adults will be at 2, 4, 6 and 8 o'clock. An added attraction will be the singing of Mr. William Kelley of Boston, a celebrated church tenor soloist, who will give a program of sacred numbers in connection with the picture. His selections will include "Noli," "Calvary," "The Lord is My Light," "Nazareth," and others. He will be accompanied by Mr. Henry Forrest of this city.

HEAVY LOSS IN
CARBARN FIRES

Second in Boston Within Two Weeks Caused Damage of $400,000

46 Persons Nearby Guided to Safety—Firemen Imperilled by Live Wires

BOSTON, March 4.—A fire of unknown origin which caused damage estimated at $400,000 partly destroyed the carbarns of the Boston Elevated Railway Co. in Anny street, in a congested residential district here, today. Forty-six persons, occupying houses opposite the blazing structure, were guided through smoke-filled rooms to safety by the police. There were 15 cars burned.

Firemen fighting the flames were imperilled by live wires hanging in the street and two high power electric transformers in an adjoining building occupied by a lighting company. This was the second carbarn fire in this city within two weeks. Loss in the previous fire was $55,000.

Flames were discovered in the Amory street barns by a passerby shortly before daylight. So quickly did the blaze spread that fire was brushing the two tenement houses across the street when the firemen arrived.

While rescuees were being made in the scorched dwellings, scores of persons rushed from houses on the street in the rear of the fire, and many moved their household goods to the sidewalk. A large building occupied by a manufacturing company a few yards away from the carbarns was saved by a set of water curtains. It is said that the damage to stock from water will be heavy.

Volunteers were among the employees of the railway company helped in driving cars through flames to safety. Although handicapped by lack of water as the hydrants in front of the barns could not be reached because of the flames, the firemen saved one section of the structure. The fire alarm signal box nearby was put out of commission by a burst of flame and the second and fourth alarms had to be sent from points some distance from the fire.

HARDINGS CALLED
AT WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Woodrow Wilson spent last evening in the White House studying bills and resolutions which had reached him from the capital during the day. He retired later than usual.

Many messages were received congratulating him on his administration of the nation's affairs and carrying good wishes in his return to private life. The names of those sending the messages were not made public, but it was said that several were from abroad.

The president late in the day took his customary automobile ride. He was not accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, who remained behind to superintend the winding up of household affairs. It was on the president's return that Mr. and Mrs. Harding called at the White House.

Charles A. Donahue, Frank J. Gavey, Raymond Lavallee and Joseph P. Donahue. The resolution committee includes the following: Hon. Thomas J. Enright, Attorneys William J. White, Max Goldman, William A. Hogan and Patrick J. Reynolds, and Clerk of Court George F. Toye.

Hon. James E. O'Donnell, ex-mayor

of Lowell, and Attorney Daniel J. Donahue spoke in eulogy of the deceased. "I have known John McClure for eighteen years," said Mr. O'Donnell, "in his troubles and his joys, and I do not know of a more genial and pleasant personality. Court clerks, officers and attaches, were always glad to see him, for he never came here without a smile upon his face. I have always envied his wholesome, likable ways, his good wishes, and pleasant disposition." Mr. O'Donnell then moved that the above mentioned committees be appointed. Attorney Donahue spoke after the committees had been chosen. "There is," he said, "no truer saying than that in the midst of life we are in death. It was only a few days ago that I met the deceased, alive and well. He was a man of genial, kindly and gentle disposition. The asperities of the profession disturbed him little. Combined with his kindly and lovable character was a keen and alert mind. Always he was the role of peacemaker among men. He took a lively interest in the affairs of this city, its men and its politics. He knew what was important to the citizens of Lowell. He is a great loss, because we need men of his kind in the legal profession. His kindly spirit might well be emulated by us all. He was ever on the side of the lowly and oppressed."

adjourning the meeting. "I never in all my acquaintance with John McClure, heard him say an unkind word of anyone. I liked him as well as anyone I have ever met in the course of my profession. I hope that some day we can set a little for the public expression of our sentiments in this matter." An adjournment was taken at the conclusion of Judge Enright's remarks.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

"I WAS STARVED FOR A BITE OF PAPER!"

The goat looked down in confusion when Mr. Hobdell, the clown, told Nancy and Nick that he had eaten their precious map.

"When did you do it?" asked Nick severely.

"Why did you do it?" asked Nancy. "I did it when you turned your back to show out of the cave," confessed the goat. "And I did it for two reasons. First, because I was starved for a bite of paper. Second, because I had promised Satchel-Satchel to help him. The fact is, I have to help him whether I wish to or not, as I am an animal."

"Surely not now," Nick reminded the goat. "You are standing on the edge of the cliff."

The goat looked amazed. "Why, so I am! I never thought of that! Do you suppose I'll blow up, too, like the frog?"

"No, of course not," put in the clown. "You were always a goat, weren't you?"

HARDING AND WILSON EXTEND SYMPATHY

WASHINGTON, March 3.—President-elect Harding and President-elect Wilson through a written message today extended their sympathy to Mrs. Champ Clark on the death yesterday of her husband, the democratic leader and former speaker of the house of representatives.

President-elect Harding accompanied by Mrs. Harding, leaving their hotel for the first time after their arrival in Washington shortly after noon called on Mrs. Clark late in the day. They spent about a quarter of an hour with Bennett Clark, son of the dead house leader, and Mrs. Clark. The president-elect had previously extended his sympathy to Mrs. Clark in a telegram sent last night.

President-elect Wilson tendered their sympathy earlier in the day in a letter written by the president and delivered by a White House messenger. As another mark of respect to Mr. Clark's memory the president issued orders for the lowering to half-staff of all flags on government buildings during the funeral services here in the chamber of the house on Saturday and at Bowling Green, the former speaker's home, on Monday.

The expressions of sympathy from the president and president-elect, however, were but two among hundreds.

LOWELL SOCIAL SERVICE LEAGUE

An appeal for funds to carry on its social welfare work during the coming year is made by the Lowell Social Service League, which needs $4000 immediately. Unless this sum is forthcoming from the public-spirited citizens of this city, it is stated that the organization will be forced to curtail its work, if not to cease all activities. During the past year the personal service of the Red Cross was carried on under the direction of this body, which combined this war-time work with its usual place work. The league desires for 1920 to continue to do the things it has accomplished in the past. It seeks funds to alleviate temporary distress of families, place them on the high road to independence, and put them in contact with the city's best and most helpful influences. It also aims to arrange for the co-operation of Lowell charities. For this purpose it has carried on a confidential exchange, registering the various organizations interested in assisting deserving families which are having difficulties in making both ends meet. Its third object, as announced, is "to promote the general welfare of the community by making known its needs and helping to supply the remedy when there is no other agency better fitted for the task."

EDITOR DECLARES HE WAS KIDNAPPED

TORONTO, Ont., March 4.—Henry Potter, editor of a Philadelphia newspaper which has been attacking Henry Ford for alleged anti-Semitism and who recently was reported mysteriously to have disappeared while seeking to interview the manufacturer, arrived at police headquarters here yesterday with a story of having been kidnapped by three men on Mr. Ford's estate near Detroit.

To the police and newspapermen he told the following tale:

"That on the night of Feb. 13, after two ineffectual attempts to see Mr. Ford, he visited his estate and was seized by the trio; that he was driven away in an automobile and threatened with death after making several attempts to escape; that he was taken from Detroit across the border into Windsor; that he was informed he was being taken to Gochran 'never to go back to the states again,' and that finally he escaped from his captors at West Toronto station."

At the time of Potter's reported disappearance, Mr. Ford was first to order a search made for him, fearing he might have fallen through the ice on a pond on his estate. The search was discontinued after it was reported friends had received telegrams from Potter several days after he dropped out of sight.

RETURN OF CONSTANTINE

Sunday at the Opera House the first showing in Lowell of the motion picture views of the return of King Constantine to the throne of Greece will be shown. Performances will be continuous and will start at 2 p. m. This is absolutely the first photographic reproduction of King Constantine since his return to the throne and includes a number of his high moments in Switzerland and on his way back to Athens. While the pictures should have a special appeal to the Greek population of the city, they will prove interesting to Lowell people in general.

FURTHER COMPENSATION

James Mulvey, who was injured while at work in the shoe-shed shops Nov. 14, 1918, and who received compensation because of his injuries up to and including Aug. 29, 1920, is entitled to further compensation, according to a notice received recently by Patrick J. Hezonda, counsel for Mr. Mulvey, from Frank J. Donahue of the Industrial Accident Board. Mr. Mulvey returned to work during the week of Aug. 2, 1920, but a week later he had to give up and accept of his compensation. He will now receive $14 a week until such time as his disability is partially or totally removed.

NORTH BILLERICA

A largely attended meeting of Loyal Asa Pollard lodge, 1402 P. M. U. of North Billerica was held Wednesday night and a feature of the meeting was the initiation of a large class of members, the exercises being conducted by the degree staff of Integrity lodge of this city. Routine business was transacted and interesting remarks were made by Provincial Grand Deputy George W. Embley of this city. Refreshments were served and entertainment numbers were given.

NORTH CHILMARK

There will be no formal observance of St. Patrick's day in North Chilmark this year because of the industrial depression in that part of the town. This decision was arrived at at a recent meeting of the Catholic societies of the North. The Chilmark Catholic club, however, will hold a concert on the evening of March 17.

Architects Submit Plans to Commissioner Marchand

The office of Public Buildings Commissioner George F. Marchand has something of the appearance of an exhibition of a school of architecture on the day on which prizes are awarded. A large table is filled with designs for the new fire station that is to be erected at the corner of Pine and Stevens streets in the Highlands. Commissioner Marchand and Commissioner Salmon are to make the final selection of the design for the station. The designs are mostly in black and white, but a few of the architects have taken the trouble to color their designs to show how they will look in the natural colors of their surroundings.

missioner Marchand and Commissioner Salmon are to make the final selection of the design for the station. The designs are mostly in black and white, but a few of the architects have taken the trouble to color their designs to show how they will look in the natural colors of their surroundings.

first floor are a living room, kitchen, pantry, officers' room, dormitory for six men and shower bath. The second floor is to be given up to storage purposes. The design submitted by Thaddeus W. Parks provides that the dormitory shall be upstairs, with officers' room, kitchen and living room on the first floor. The material from which the building is to be constructed is not specified. There is to be a slate or tile roof.

Millard F. Davis and Harrison E. Byam have submitted two plans. They provide for a single door in each plan, one on Stevens street and the other on the corner of Stevens and Pine sts. The buildings are to be of brick and plaster, with red tile roofs. There is a Dutch door. Lawns are on both sides of the buildings. There is a dormitory for six men on the first floor. In the second plan there is a work room and coal pocket in the basement. A design by George Budd has many of the features of an up-to-date garage. There are two double doors in front. The living quarters are on one side of the house and what might be called the "machinery quarters" on the other side.

As soon as a plan has been selected and the services of an architect assigned for Commissioner Marchand to commence the construction on the new building for which residents of the Highlands have been waiting many months.

For that little household burn

There is nothing better than Resinol to relieve the smart and sting. Its gentle medication soothes while it heals. Apply freely but gently to the affected surface, so as not to disturb the injured skin. Then place a light bandage over the burn to keep out the air. Resinol Ointment hastens the healing - an important point - as broken skin means an opportunity for germs to enter and if they do they often cause painful and dangerous inflammation. Your druggist sells Resinol in two sizes.

FAREWELL ADDRESS BY
VICE PRES. MARSHALL

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Following is the text of the address of Vice President Marshall on his retirement from office:

"Very shortly I shall have ended my official life as the constitutional presiding officer of this body. That moment, when it arrives, will not mark my demotion into the ranks of the average American citizen, for I never arose above them.

"I sprang from the loins of men who helped to lay the foundations of the republic. At my birth my father placed upon my baby brow the coronal of a free born American citizen. In my youth I was taught that if I were worthy, no prince nor potentate nor electorate could add to or detract from the honor of that royal coronet.

"I may have failed but I have tried to keep the faith. I have never doubted that, so far as the principles of civil government are concerned, the pillars of Hercules rest upon the Declaration of Independence and the constitution of the United States. To my mind there is no beyond. The forms under which the principles of the republic are administered may need changes to meet changing conditions, but the underlying idea does not, for truth is unchanging and eternal. What was so when the morning stars sang together will be so when the angel of the Apocalypse appears.

"I venture to express this much of that idea: A government dedicated to the inalienable rights of man to life, to liberty and to the pursuit of happiness, can find its perfect accomplishment only in representatives brave and strong enough to rise above the ambitions, passions and prejudices of individuals and groups. Representative government was intended to guarantee these inalienable rights of men through the enactment and enforcement of laws calculated to preserve and promote equal and exact justice to all men. Regiments die because priests mumble their creeds but have no faith in their cause. Governments go to wreck because their statesmen doubt about their shipboard but let a friendly enemy pass the ford.

"I freely grant the right of this people to change our form of government and to adopt other basic principles, but, if it is to be done, let it be done decently and directly so that all of us may know it. The old faith has already too many sleek and smiling jobs asking of it, 'Is it well with thee, my brother?'

"While the old order endures let representatives represent the old ideals; let it be understood that they are not mere bell-boys, subject to call for legislative cracked ice every time the victims of a debauch of greed, gambling or improvidence feel the fever of frenzied need.

"The life is more than meat and the body more than raiment. It is of minor importance who holds the wealth of the nation if the hearts of all its people beat with true historical American throbs. The clothes may mark but the clothes can not make the gentleman. The economic rehabilitation of America is of first moment but the rehabilitation of the ancient faith which upheld the ragged continental, emerged in pristine glory from the throes of Civil war, and buried the smiling and undaunted face against the grim engines of tyranny upon the fields of France, is a far greater work.

"It is enough—perhaps too much. Who am I to suggest, even with shame-faced humility, anything to you, for eight long years, crowded with events which have forever changed the currents of the world's history. I have been with you. I come to the end of them with a feeling of beautiful gratitude to you all for these little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and charity which have marked your friendship and good will. You have been good to me. The odor of your friendship will sweeten any air that I may breathe. Not one of you can wish for himself a kinder fate than I. I go but you remain. I leave with the same inviolate cry in my soul which I came to you. My country with its new and unusual cry for the American, but it has, I fear, myriad concepts. To some it means broad acres and fertile fields; to many, opportunity for personal preferment; to a thoughtless few, the right to utter every vagrant word which finds lodgment in a mind diseased; to the half educated, religion should be governed as soon by the infant's cry as by the prophet's warning. But to me it is the composite voice of all the good and wise and self-sacrificing souls who trod or tread its soil, calling for that liberty which is law-encrowned, preaching that doctrine which seeks not its own but the common good and, above all, warning us by the memory of the dead and the hope of the unborn to close our ears to the mouthings of every peripatetic reformer who tells us that the way to sanctify the republic is to remove every landmark which has hitherto marked the boundaries of national and individual life.

"It is no new religion we need. Our creed should be: Use Love; one faith—one baptism; the Lord of justice, who was with Washington at Valley Forge, Grant and Lee at Appomattox, Pershing on the fields of France; the faith that under a republican form of government alone democracy permanently can endure; the baptism of that spirit which will not be content until no man is above the penalties and no man beyond the protection of our laws.

"Let him who goes and him who stays remember that he who saves his life at the loss of his country's honor, loses it, and he who loses his life for the sake of his country's honor, saves it."

TOTAL APPROPRIATIONS WERE $2,806,029,647

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Total appropriations in the present session of congress for the fiscal year 1922, were $2,806,029,647. Chairman Warren of the committee on appropriations announced in the senate today, this represents a reduction of $1,433,485,224 from the estimates submitted and a cut from appropriations for 1921 of $355,247,919, he said.

LOWELL HIGH SCHOOL REGIMENT OFFICERS

James Conway of the high school faculty, in charge of the boys' regiment drill, gave out this morning at drill hour the results of the competitive examination for promotion and selection of high officers in the school regiment, which was held in the high school annex on the afternoon of February 18. This is the first year in which the officers have been chosen upon an examination revealing individual capacity and ability to command. Previously, the entire list of officers were chosen by the written examination method. Hereafter, selection of the highest officers of the regiment will not be made until about the middle of the school year, and then only after a rigid, practical examination. The officers for the rest of the year will be as follows:

William Thompson, colonel; John Sullivan, major; Arthur Riley, major; William McCann, regimental adjutant; Andrew Peverill, regimental quartermaster.

Captains, George Gagan, William Shea, Ernest Anderson, Allan MacKenzie, Raymond Donovan, Joseph Garrity.

First lieutenants, William Moore, Wayne Jenkins, Edward Corley, Brendon Leahy, Roland Crowley, James Henry, Francis McDonagh, Guy Butler.

Second lieutenants, Everett Humphreys, David Connors, Francis Regan, William Hornby, James Geary, Eugene Labrie.

Regimental sergeant major, Timothy O'Keefe.

Regimental quartermaster sergeant, Joseph Breen.

Battalion sergeant majors, James Rusby, Kenneth Corlew.

First sergeants, Burton Bryant, Ralph Jenkins, Daniel Hanson, Vernal Robey, Philip Payton, Raymond Sullivan.

Second sergeants, Ernest Craig, Michael Verid, Saul Stein, James Saunders, Louis Reault.

Third sergeant, Simon Cohen.

Other sergeants will be chosen from present corporals at the competition to be held during boys' battalion night in the annex drill shed on the night of April 22.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Valedictorian and Salutatorian for Class of 1921

It was announced at the office of Henry H. Harris, principal of the high school, this morning, that William Hill McCann has been chosen valedictorian of the class of 1921 and Hannah Mabel Adams, salutatorian.

McCann is the son of Michael and Della F. McCann, of 75 Plain street and was graduated from the Washington grammar school in 1917. On entering high school he took up the 4-year college course, which he will have completed in June, in preparation for Holy Cross college which he intends to enter in the fall of this year. McCann has been acting as a captain in the boys' regiment, and at drill hour today, when the results of the competitive examination for promotion in the regiment were announced, he was elevated to the position of regimental adjutant. Last year McCann was on the local school debating team against Salem high school and will again represent his school in a return debate with Salem in high school hall March 18.

Miss Adams is the daughter of Mark A. and E. Blanche Adams, of 43 Berkeley avenue and was graduated from the Moody school in 1917. Likewise, she also will have completed a four year college course in June of this year, but will return for a post-graduate course at the high school next year. She is preparing to enter Wellesley college.

Of particular notice is the fact that both the valedictorian and salutatorian are students of the college course, generally considered the most difficult of the high school curriculum. In previous years, the greater number of honor students have been those studying the commercial course.

MATRIMONIAL

The marriage of Corporal Frank Radnosky of Camp Devens and Miss Alice May Matson of 63 Carolyn street, this city, took place Wednesday night at All Souls' church, the officiating clergyman being Rev. Mr. McFiebert. The bride was attired in a gray tulle traveling suit with hat to match and carried white carnations. At the close of the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride and in attendance were guests from Denver, Colo., Pittsburg, Pa., Providence, R. I., and Springfield. The couple will make their home at 68 Carolyn street.

"GOOD LUCK AND BEST WISHES"

FULL TEXT OF HARDING'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Full policy of non-involvement in old world affairs. Confident of our ability to work out our own destiny and fearlessly guarding our right to do so, we seek no part in dictating the destinies of the old world. We do not mean to be entangled. We will accept no responsibility except as our own conscience and judgment in each instance may determine.

"Our eyes never will be blind to a developing menace, our ears never deaf to the call of civilization. We recognize the new order in the world, with the closer contacts which progress has brought, we sense the call of the human heart for fellowship, fraternity and co-operation. The American people, on the foundation laid by the inspired fathers, can be a party to no permanent military alliance. It can enter into no political commitments, nor assume any economic obligations or subject our decisions to any other than our own authority."

I am sure our own people will not misunderstand nor will the world misconstrue. We have no thought to impede the paths to closer relationship. We wish to promote understanding. We want to do our part in maintaining offensive warfare so hateful that governments and peoples who resort to it must prove the righteousness of their cause or stand as outlaws before the bar of civilization.

Association for Counsel
We are ready to associate ourselves with the nations of the world, great and small, for conference, for counsel, to seek the expressed views of world opinion, to recommend a way to approximate disarmament and relieve the crushing burdens of military and naval establishments. We elect to participate in suggesting plans for mediation, conciliation and arbitration, and would gladly join in that expressed desire of progress which seeks to clarify and settle the laws of international relationship and establish a world court for the disposition of such justifiable questions as nations are agreed to submit thereto. In expressing aspirations, in seeking practical plans, in translating humanity's new concept of righteousness, justice and its hatred of war into recommended action we are ready most heartily to unite, but every commitment must be made in the exercise of our national sovereignty.

Since freedom impelled and independence inspired and nationality exalted, a world super government is contrary to everything we cherish and can have no sanction by our republic. This is not selfishness. It is sanctity. It is not aloofness; it is security. It is not suspicion of others; it is patriotic adherence to the things which made us what we are.

Today, better than ever before, we know the aspirations of humanity and share them. We have come to a new realization of our place in the world and a new appraisal of our nation by the world. The selfishness of these United States is a thing proven, our devotion to peace for ourselves and for the world is well established, our concern for preserved civilization has its impassioned and heroic expression. There was an American failure to resist the attempt of a person of civilization. There will be no failure today or tomorrow.

Rest on Popular Will
The success of our popular government rests wholly upon the correct interpretation of the deliberate, intelligent, dependable popular will of America. To deliberate questioning of a sacred choice of national policy, where internationality was to supersede nationality, we turned to a referendum to the American people. There was ample discussion and there is a public mandate in manifest understanding.

America is ready to encourage, eager to initiate, anxious to participate in any friendly program likely to lessen the probability of war and promote that brotherhood of mankind which must be the highest conception of human relationship.

Because we cherish ideals of justice and peace, because we appoint international unity and helpful relationship no less highly than any people of the world we aspire to a high place in the world leadership of civilization and we hold a national America, the proven republic, the unshaken temple of representative democracy, to be the only source of inspiration and example, the highest agency of strengthening and uplifting mankind on both continents.

Marked in a world wide bond of understanding. It is needed among individuals, among peoples, among governments, and it will inaugurate an era of good feeling to mark the birth of a new order. In such understanding men will strike confidently for the promotion of their better relationships and nations will promote the comities so essential to peace.

Trade Ties Bind Closely
We must understand that ties of trade bind nations in closest intimacy and none may receive except as it gives. We have not strengthened ours in accordance with our resources or our genius, notably on our own continent, where a galaxy of republics reflect the glory of new world democracy, but in the new order of finance and trade we mean to promote enlarged activities and seek expanded confidence.

Perhaps we can make no more helpful contribution by example than a republic's capacity to emerge from the wreckage of war. While the world's travail did not leave us devastated lands nor desolated cities, left no gaping wounds, no breast with hate, it did not involve us in the delirium of expenditure, in expanded currency and credits, in unbalanced industry, in unspendable waste and disturbed relationships. While it uncovered our portion of hateful selfishness at home, it also revealed the heart of America as sound and fearless and beating in confidence unflinching.

Amid it all we have riveted the gaze of all civilization to the selfishness and the righteousness of representative democracy, where our freedom never has made offensive warfare, never has sought territorial aggrandizement through force, never has turned our portion of arms until reason had been exhausted. When the governments of earth shall have established a freedom like our own and shall have sanctioned the pursuit of peace as we have practiced it, I believe the last sorrow and the final sacrifice of international warfare will have been written.

Our Supreme Task
Our supreme task is the resumption of our onward normal way. Reconstruction, readjustment, restoration, all these must follow. I would like to have them. If it will lighten the spirit and add to the resolution with which we take up the task, let me repeat for our nation, we shall give no people just cause to make war upon us. We hold no national prejudices, we entertain no spirit of revenge, we do not hate, we do not covet, we dream of no conquest, nor boast of armed powers.

If, despite this attitude, war is again forced upon us, I earnestly hope a way may be found which will unite our individual and collective strength and consecrate all America, materially and spiritually, body and soul, to national defense. I can vision the ideal republic, where every man and woman is called under the flag for assignment to duty, for whatever service, military or civic, the individual is best fitted, where every call to universal service every plan, strategy or facility, all in the sublime sacrifice for profit shall inure to the benefit of private individual, corporation or combination, but all above the normal shall flow into the defense chest of the nation. There is something inherently wrong, something out of accord with the ideals of representative democracy when a portion of our citizenship turns its activity to private gain and defensive war while another is fighting, sacrificing or dying for national preservation.

Unity of Spirit and Purpose
Out of such universal service will come a new unity of spirit and purpose, new confidence and concordance, which would make our defense impregnable, our triumph assured.

Then we should have little or no disorganization of our economic, industrial and commercial systems at home, no staggering war debts, no swollen fortunes to blight the sacrifices of our soldiers, no excuse for sedition, no pitiable slackness, no outcries of envy and jealousy, would have no hold for their moribund development and resolution would be without the passion which engenders it.

A regret for the mistakes of yesterday must not, however, blind us to the tasks of today. War never left such an aftermath, there has been staggering loss of life and incalculable wastage of materials. Nations are still groping for return to stable ways, encouraging ineffectiveness confronts us the all the war-torn nations, and these obligations must be provided for.

No civilization can survive repudiation. We can reduce the abnormal expenditures and we will. We can strike at war taxation and we must. We must face the grim necessity, with full knowledge that the task is to be solved, and we must proceed with a full realization that no statute enacted by man can repeal the inexorable laws of nature. Our most dangerous tendency is to expect too much of government and at the same time do for it too little.

"We contemplate the immediate task of putting our public household in order. We need a rigid and put same economy, combined with fiscal justice, and it must be attended by individual prudence and thrift which are so essential to this trying hour and reassuring for the future."

Reduction of Wars Reaction
The business world reflects the disturbance of war's reaction. Herein flows the life blood of material existence. The economic mechanism is intricate and its parts interdependent and has suffered the shocks and jars incident to abnormal demands, credit inflation and price upheavals. The normal balances have been impaired, the channels of distribution have been clogged, the relations of labor and management have been strained. We must seek the readjustment with care and courage. Our people must give and take. Prices must reflect the receding fever of war activities. Perhaps we never shall know the old levels of wage again, because war invariably readjusts compensations and the necessities of life will show their inseparable relationship, but we must strive for normalcy to reach stability. All the penalties will not be light nor even-ly distributed.

There is no way of making them so. There is no instant step from disorder to order. We must face a condition of grim reality, change our losses and start afresh. It is the oldest lesson of civilization, I would like government to do all it can to mitigate them. In understanding, in mutuality of interest, in concern for the common good our task will be solved.

No altered system will work a miracle, any wild experiment will only add to the confusion. Our best assurance lies in efficient administration of our proven system.

From Destruction to Production
The forward course of the business cycle is unmistakable. Peoples are turning from destruction to production. Industry has sensed the changed order and our own people are turning to resume their normal onward way. The call is for productive America to go on. I know that congress and the administration will favor every wise government policy and the restoration and encourage continued progress.

I speak for administrative efficiency, for lightened tax burdens, for sound commercial practices, for adequate credit facilities, for sympathetic concern for all agricultural problems, for the omission of unnecessary interference of government with business, for an end to government's experiment in business and for more efficient business in government administration.

With all of this must attend a mindfulness of the human side of all activities so that social, industrial and economic justice will be spared with the purposes of a righteous people.

With the nationwide induction of womanhood into our political life, we may count upon her education, her refinement, her intelligence, and her influence to exalt the sound order. We count upon her exercise of the full privileges and the performance of the duties of citizenship to exert the attainment of the highest state.

Prayer for Industrial Peace
I wish for an America no less alert in guarding against dangers from within than it is watchful against enemies from without. Our fundamental law recognizes no class, no group, no section. There must be none in legislation or administration. The supreme inspiration is the common weal. Humanity hangs for international peace and we crave it with all mankind. My most fervent prayer for America is for industrial peace, with its rewards, widely and generally distributed, and the inspirations of equal opportunity.

No one may justly deny the equality of opportunity which made us what we are. We have mistaken unpreparedness to embrace it to be a challenge of the reality, and our concern for making all citizens fit for participation will give added strength of citizenship and magnify our achievement.

It revolution insists upon overturning established order, let other peoples make the tragic experiment. There is no place for it in America. When no world was threatened civilization pledged our resources and our lives to its preservation, and when revolution threatens we unfurl the flag of law and order and renew our consecration. Ours is a constitutional freedom where the popular will is the law supreme and minorities are sacredly protected. Our revisions, reformatory and evolutionary reflect a deliberate judgment and an orderly progress, and we mean to cure our ills, but never destroy or permit destruction by force.

I had rather submit our industrial controversies to the conference table in advance than to a settlement table after conflict and suffering. The earth is thirsting for the cup of good will. Understanding is its fountain source. I would like to acclaim an era of good feeling and dependable prosperity and all the blessings which attend.

It has been proved again and again that we cannot, while throwing our markets open to the world, maintain American standards of living and opportunity and hold our industrial eminence in such unequal competition. There is a lurking fallacy in the theory of banished barriers of trade, but preserved American standards require our higher production costs to be reflected in our tariffs on imports.

Today we never force, restriction, reciprocity, seeking trade restoration and expansion, we must adjust our tariffs to the new order. We seek participation in the world's exchange because therein lies our way to widened influence and the triumph of peace. We know full well we cannot sell where we do not buy and we cannot sell successfully where we do not carry.

Opportunity is calling not alone for the restoration, but for a new era in production, transportation and trade. We shall answer it best by meeting the demand of a surpassing home market, by promoting self reliance in production and by bidding enterprise, genius and efficiency to carry our cargoes in American bottoms to the markets of the world.

An America of Homes
We would not have an America lying within and for herself alone, but we would have her self reliant, independent and ever nobler, stronger and richer. Believing in our higher standards, reared through constitutional liberty and maintained opportunity, we invite the world to the same heights. But pride in things wrought is no reflex of a completed task. Common welfare is the goal of our national endeavor. Wealth is not inimical to well-being. It ought to be its friendliest agency.

There never can be equality of nations or possessions so long as the human plan contains varied talents and differing degrees of industry and thrift. We ought to be a country free from great blotches of distressed poverty. We ought to find a way to guard against the perils and penalties of unemployment. We want an America of homes, illuminated with hope and happiness, where mothers freed from the necessity for long hours of toil beyond their own doors, may preside as befits the hearthstones of American citizenship. We want the cradle of American childhood rocked under conditions so wholesome and so hopeful that no blight may touch it in its development and we want to provide that no selfish interest, no material necessity, no lack of opportunity shall prevent the gaining of that education so essential to best citizenship.

There is no short cut to the making of these idealistic glances realities. The world has witnessed, again and again, the utility and the mischief of the considered remedies for social and economic disorders. But we are mindful today as never before of the friction of modern industrialism and we must learn its causes and reduce its evil consequences by sober and tested methods. Where genius has made for great possibilities justice and happiness must be reflected in a greater common welfare.

Service the Supreme Commitment
Service is the supreme commitment of life. I would rejoice to acclaim the era of the golden rule and crown it with the autonomy of service. I pledge an administration wherein all the agencies of government are called to serve and ever promote an understanding of the common weal.

Two-Story House, at 226 Warren St., the Premises Known as "The Agent's House," to the Highest Bona Fide Bidder
ON SATURDAY, MARCH 5, 1921, AT 2 O'CLOCK IN THE AFTERNOON

The house is one of the most attractive ones, and no such bargain has been offered for sale for a long time. It is built on a lot containing nine thousand, one hundred and six feet of land, right in the middle of the city. It is near school and churches, also near the business section of the city. This is a very attractive proposition for one who wants to buy a home or for one who wants to make a very profitable investment for the future.

Terms: $400.00 must be deposited with the auctioneer as soon as properly is struck off. Other terms made known at the sale.

standing of government of the popular will.

One cannot stand in this presence and be unmindful of the tremendous responsibility. The world upheaval has added heavily to our tasks, but with the realization comes the surge of high resolve and there is reassurance in belief in the God given destiny of our republic. If I felt that there is to be the responsibility of tomorrow, I should shrink from the American flag, here are a hundred millions, with common concern and shared responsibility, answerable to God and country. The republic summons them to their duty and I invite co-operation.

I accept my part with single-mindedness of purpose and humility of spirit and I implore the favor and guidance of God in his heaven. With these I am unafraid and confidently face the future.

I have taken the solemn oath of office on that passage of holy writ wherein it is asked thee what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy and walk humbly. This I pledge to God and country.

VICE PRES. COOLIDGE IN BRIEF ADDRESS

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Following is the full text of the inaugural address of Vice President Coolidge.

"Five generations ago there was revealed to the people of this nation a new relationship between man and man, but through the duly determined conscience of their own character. Therein they recognized a legislative empowered to express the will of the people in law, a judiciary required to determine and state such law, and an executive charged with securing obedience to the law, all holding their office not by reason of some superior force, but through the duly determined conscience of their own character."

"To the house, close to the heart of the nation, renewing its whole membership by frequent elections, representing the people, reflecting their common purpose, has been granted a full measure of the power of legislation and exclusive authority to originate taxation. To the senate, renewing its membership by degrees, representing in part the sovereign states, has been granted not only a full measure of the power of legislation, but, if possible, far more important functions. To it is entrusted the duty to review that to negotiation there may be added ratification, and to appointment approval. But its greatest function of all, too little mentioned and too little understood, with their exercised in legislation or reviewing is the preservation of liberty. Not merely the right of the majority, they little need protection, but the rights of the minority, from whatever source they may be assailed. The great object for us to seek here, for the constitution identifies the vice presidency with the senate, is to continue to make this chamber, as it was intended by the fathers, the shield of liberty. An enormous power is here conferred, capable of much good or ill. Open it may be to abuse, but necessary, wholly and absolutely necessary, to secure the required result."

"Whatever its faults, whatever its human imperfections, there is no legislative body in all history that has used its powers with more wisdom and discretion, more uniformly for the execution of the public will, or more in harmony with the spirit of the authority of the people which has created it, than the United States senate. I take up the duties the people have assigned me under the constitution, which was conceived to make this chamber, as it presiding over this senate, agreeably to its rules and regulations, deeply conscious that it will continue to function in harmony with its high traditions as a great deliberative body, without passion and without fear, unmoved by clamor, but most sensitive to the right, the strongest of government, according to that the vision of past generations may be more and more the reality of generations yet to come."

Service the Supreme Commitment
Service is the supreme commitment of life. I would rejoice to acclaim the era of the golden rule and crown it with the autonomy of service. I pledge an administration wherein all the agencies of government are called to serve and ever promote an understanding of the common weal.

MARCH WIND FOR INAUGURATION

Visitors Poured Into Washington During Early Part of the Day

Mayor Hylan Sends Message to Harding Via Airplane

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Bright weather, with a cold, blustering March wind, marked the opening of inauguration day. Some clouds were banked in the east, in the early morning, but these soon gave way before the driving northwesterly wind and made it seemingly certain that Warren G. Harding would be able to take the oath of office in the open on the east portico of the capitol as planned.

There was a decided overnight drop in temperature with indications that it would be somewhat uncomfortable for the crowds on the capitol plaza and along Pennsylvania avenue.

Although speeches, military and civil, which have marked inaugurations in the past, had been put under the ban by the incoming president, visitors still poured into Washington during the early part of the day. The capitol plaza drew many of them and the vanguard of the thousands who were to crowd parks there for several blocks was on hand before 8 o'clock.

They had approximately five hours to wait before Mr. Harding would take the oath of office and accordingly had brought along campstools or boxes on which to rest.

The president-elect and Mrs. Harding were up at 5 o'clock and had breakfast in their suite at the New Willard hotel. Mr. Harding then read the morning newspapers.

Gets Message Via Airplane

After breakfast, Mr. Harding shaved himself and dressed leisurely. His first visitors of the day were two police captains from New York, who came to Washington in an airplane to present a message from Mayor Hylan.

The vice president-elect and Mrs. Coolidge also arose early and had breakfast in their suite at the New Willard with Mr. Coolidge's father, Col. John Calvin Coolidge, their two sons, John and Calvin, Jr., and several personal friends.

Asked how he felt on the morning of his inauguration day, the vice president-elect said he did not feel half as important today as he did on the occasion of his graduation from high school.

President Wilson arose at 5 o'clock and after breakfast with Mrs. Wilson, he went to his study. White House officials said the president was a little fatigued as the result of working late last night on bills and other official business.

Despite the abandonment of the inaugural procession and other ceremonies, there were many marching clubs, boosters' clubs and "original" Harding organizations on hand. A great many of them came from Ohio.

Thermometers along Pennsylvania avenue showed 30 degrees and the wind had a sharp bite to it around 3 o'clock but before 10 the mercury had climbed 10 degrees up the scale and was still going up.

The day's program was officially opened with the arrival of the congressional inaugural committee at the New Willard at 9:50.

President-elect Harding, with Mrs. Harding and the vice president-elect and Mrs. Coolidge left their hotel for the White House at 10:20 a. m. They were accompanied by members of the congressional inaugural committee and riding in columns on either side of the automobiles were four troops of cav-

Accompanying the president-elect in the White House automobile, was Senator Knox, chairman of the inaugural committee, and Representative Cannon. Next came an automobile bearing Vice President-elect Coolidge, Vice President Marshall and other members of the inaugural committee. In a third automobile were Mrs. Harding and other members of the congressional committee. In another machine rode Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Marshall.

Cheers for Harding and Coolidge.

the front door to the step where the White House automobile waited. He leaned on his cane, but was otherwise unassisted until he reached the steps. He was helped down the steps and into the car by White House attendants who placed his feet on each ascending step as the descent was made.

The president-elect waited until Mr. Wilson had been assisted into the car, and had taken his seat. Then he and Senator Knox and Representative Cannon entered the car. When the party was seated, President Wilson raised his hat slightly and with the signal a battery of cameras began to click.

Vice President Marshall assumed the chair of the senate immediately after his arrival at the capitol. Waiting for the inaugural ceremonies some senators shouted: "Vote, vote!" on the naval appropriation bill and Senator Lodge moved a recess of 15 minutes until 11:45 a. m.

Soon after the president entered the room, Mr. Harding left for the senate chamber. Meantime the president took up the work of signing bills as they were presented to him by the White House executive clerk.

The president signed the sundry civil and hospital appropriation bills, the resolution voting $750,000 to Mrs. Champ Clark and some minor bills. It was said he would pocket the immigration restriction bill.

Meantime the house had adjourned sine die at 11:50 a. m.

The label of the senate recess was halted sharply at 11:45 by the vice president's gavel. The senate then adjourned to the house for further questions.

President Wilson left the capitol at 11:55 and drove to his new home on S street.

The house of representatives was announced to wait on President Wilson to ascertain if he had any further requests.

The house of representatives was announced to wait on President Wilson to ascertain if he had any further requests.

The senate clock was turned back 15 minutes at five minutes before noon.

Senator Lodge soon announced that President Wilson had no further communications to make to congress.

SUB THREATENS TO ROLL OVER CASTORIA

NEW LONDON, Ct., March 4.—The submarine O-7, one of the largest of the navy's undersea craft, was threatening to roll over on Wilderness rocks off Fisher's Island, today. She ran aground last night during a heavy fog.

Tugs were sent out today to make an effort to drag the O-7, off the rocks. Fifteen of the crew of 25 were taken off by the coast guard station at Fisher's Island.

THE HARDINGS' LAST DAY AT HOME!

The Hardings' last day at home in Marion, O., was marked by an affectionate farewell by the townsfolk who have known them intimately 'most all their lives. The famous "front porch" saw its last reception when thousands of the Marion people gathered to present the new president and first lady with a silver plaque. The presentation was made by Rev. T. H. McAfee (at Mrs. Harding's left), pastor of Trinity Baptist Church which the Hardings attend. During the ceremony Mrs. Harding broke into tears. At its conclusion she pressed a rose from her bouquet into her husband's hand, then scattered the rest among the crowd. Mr. and Mrs. Harding then shook hands with thousands, calling many by their first names—including even the newsboys, whom the president greeted as Bob, Smithy and Red.

Pray For Pres. Harding's Success

CLEVELAND, March 4.—Prayers that Warren G. Harding may have a successful administration and that the country may enjoy peace and prosperity under his direction, were offered in St. John's Roman Catholic church today. The prayer of Bishop Charles Carroll, written more than a century ago, and recited only in times of great public events, was read. During the final service of the retreat of the Knights of Columbus tonight, the rosary will be said for the new president.

Reginald G. Harris, son of Rev. Benjamin R. Harris, formerly pastor of the Faigle Street Baptist church for nine years, has been awarded an American field service fellowship for French universities for the year 1921-22. He is one of 25 men selected from more than 300 applicants. Harris was graduated from the local high school in 1915 and went to Brown University. After being graduated from that institution he returned as a lecturer of biology. Sailing probably in June, he will spend this summer at marine biological stations on the North and Mediterranean seas. The winter will be spent at the universities of Grenoble and Paris, two French institutions. During 1919-21, Mr. Harris was in South America with the Cornell university botanical expedition and visited Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay, Uruguay, Chile, Bolivia and Peru.

FINAL SESSION OF 66TH CONGRESS

House and Senate Members

Wearied by Series of Day and Night Sessions

Enactment of Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill—Veto of Fordney Bill Upheld

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Wearied by a series of long day and night sessions, members of the senate and house went to the capitol early today for the final session of the 66th congress.

The house, meeting at 9:30 o'clock, and the senate an hour later, expected a quick end to the final battle with the legislative jam which from time immemorial has marked the close of a congressional session. Only action on minor measures was planned before sine die adjournment, the legislative record of the expiring session having been closed when the senate recessed at 1 o'clock this morning and when the house temporarily suspended its sittings shortly after 2 o'clock.

Veto of Fordney Bill Upheld

The final sessions were productive of only one piece of legislation—final enactment of the $53,000,000 sundry civil appropriation bill after the senate had recoiled from its amendment to appropriate $10,000,000 for continuation of work on the Wilson dam project at Muscle Shoals, Ala. The house attempted to override President Wilson's veto of the Fordney emergency tariff bill, but failed by a margin of 21 votes, the ballot showing 231 against and 132 for sustaining the veto.

Enactment of the sundry civil budget left only one—the naval bill—of the 16 major appropriation measures undisposed of as the army bill was sent to the president late yesterday and the sundry civil measure was delivered to the White House early today. These two bills were the only supply measures awaiting presidential approval. All hope of passage by the senate of the naval bill disappeared at the night session.

In addition to the two appropriation bills, President Wilson had before him the immigration restriction measure, and the bill appropriating $15,000,000 for hospitalization of former service men. The president stayed up later than usual last night, signing a number of measures, including the regulation repealing most of the war laws. The measure considered as certain of death with adjournment included those providing bonuses for former service men, regulation of the coal and meat industries, provisions for good roads, a federal budget system, membership requirements in the house and reorganization of the post office.

MEXICAN COMMENT ON WILSON'S RETIREMENT

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—Bitterness against President Wilson and hope that Mr. Harding's administration would see the end of all tension between the United States and Mexico were expressed by today's newspapers.

"Mr. Wilson's retirement," said the Excelsior, "is a cause for nationwide rejoicing in Mexico, which for eight long years has been obliged to suffer from the caprices of a man who alone is responsible for our unhappiness and misfortune."

Adding to Mr. Harding as a fellow newspaperman, Señor Palavicini, head of the newspaper "El Centinela," declared that Mexico's sincere friendship between the United States and Mexico.

GORHAM STREET CHURCH RE-ELECTS PASTOR

Members of the Gorham Street P. M. church held their annual business meeting in the church vestry last evening. The meeting was called to order by Chief-Steward Sam Asquith, prayer was offered by Thomas Noble and scripture readings were given by John Pooler. Richard C. Campbell acted as clerk.

A feature of the meeting was the election of a pastor for the ensuing year. Rev. N. W. Matthews being the unanimous choice of the meeting. Rev. J. B. Ulton of Fall River was second choice and Rev. J. Fredus of Brooklyn, third. At the close of the election the following committee was appointed to escort the pastor to his church: Carl Johnson and Charles Neild, Jr. Upon being informed of his re-election the pastor delivered a short talk on church conditions.

Tellers were appointed as follows: Lester Prescott, Arthur Chapman, Roy Doherty, George Byron and George Higginbottom. A resolution protesting against the issuing of a license for the packing house in the old Harvard plant was adopted and the secretary was instructed to mail a copy to members of the municipal council. The financial report of the church was read by Treasurer S. C. Howe, while Moderator Thomas Gardner submitted a numerical and spiritual report of the church.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

(By Theatres' Own Press Agents)

SPECIAL AT THE STRAND

A special Saturday morning matinee will be held at the Strand tomorrow for the purpose of accommodating the large number of children and more particularly the children who cannot attend at the regular performances. The prices of admission will be 11 and 15 cents, tax paid, and the usual program will be given.

For Sunday the same big program of superior grade vaudeville and excellent photoplays will be given. The special picture for Sunday will be "Constance Talmadge in 'A Regular Girl'." You can't afford to miss this big treat. It's the biggest program in town.

OPERA HOUSE

The strong, sympathetic and appealing role of "Sister Giovanna," as interpreted by Miss Marquardt Fields, in "The White Sister," the play for the week at the Opera House, is one of the most striking and strongest characterizations in which this talented actress has appeared during her long and successful engagement here. Milton Byron, as the high strung officer, is also scoring heavily, while Kenneth Fleming and the rest of the cast are seen to particular advantage.

Next week's presentation will be Earl Carroll's dramatic version of George Barr McCutcheon's great hit, "Daddy Jump!" a real success of the past season and only recently released for stock use. Milton Byron will appear in the title role and is sure to score one of his biggest hits.

THE STRAND

"Once to Every Woman," with Dorothy Phillips in the leading role, will be shown again at the Strand today and tomorrow, and those who have not seen this gripping and absorbing drama should avail themselves of the remaining opportunities. It's a big subject and it's treated in a big, broad way. Mother love is the main theme. Ruth Roberts in "White Youth," is the other feature and this too has an interesting unfolding of an old story. A good comedy and weekly helps to round out a good program.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

An Egyptian woman dropped into the midst of an American home and created lots of havoc, as is shown in "Come Into the Kitchen," which is being played by Walter Fisher & Co. at the B. F. Keith theatre this week. It is a very lively affair all the way through and unusual, to say the least. The Wilson sisters, Rose and Alad, offer one of the prettiest, sweetest vaudeville turns seen here in a long time. The sisters, who are by no means strangers here, sing and dance and play the violin and piano. Their work is of the very best quality. "Cupid & Harrier" in "Going With Cupid," bring forth perfect dancing, some comedy and singing. This pair are almost too well known in the vaudeville world to need extended comment. Other acts on the lively bill are: Jack Osterman, monologist; Miss Nana, international dancer; the Thames Bros, equilibrista; and Emma O'Neill in "A Rare Bit."

HIATO THEATRE

You fight fans and lovers of society drama in the squared ring, who suffered disappointment at the hands of Benny Vagor and Freddie Jacks by their refusal to come together at the Crescent A. A. this week, should go into the Hiato theatre and see a real red blooded boxer in the person of Georges Carpentier, French pugilist and contender for the heavyweight crown in the society, draining the life of the "Warrior." While the heavy prize of the remainder of the week. He is one boxer who does not run out of a fight. The bill also carries Line Cavallieri in "Mad Love" and the usual week-end attractions.

MERIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

"Kismet," the big photoplay starring the inimitable character actor, Otto Skinner, in his first screen debut, will be the featured attraction for the entire week. This production is acclaimed as the greatest of the decade and from all reports it is living up to its reputation. Despite with interesting characterizations and situations, the story gave Otto Skinner his greatest starring vehicle on the legitimate stage. The actor of the story is laid in the ancient city of Bagdad and so great are the magnificent settings that it is a question if Bagdad could rival them. Otto Skinner plays the role of Hajj, a beggar, the same role as he played in "The Beggar Prince" production, and he carries his previous performance. "Kismet" is now playing at the Majestic theatre, Boston, at $1.00 and $2.00 prices. Four pairs of this big photoplay will be matinee and evening, see and see.

Costa Rica Looks to League Council

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, March 3.—Costa Rica will rely upon the council of the League of Nations for a solution of the controversy which has brought this country and Panama to the verge of war. The government has indicated that it will not welcome arbitration from another source, declaring that Panama has not complied with decisions handed down by President Loubet of France and Chief Justice White of the United States, who passed on the merits of the controversy several years ago. Reports reaching this city from the frontier state that several Costa Rican soldiers have been killed or gravely wounded and that Col. Obregon, commander of Costa Rican troops at Coto, is among those injured. Many volunteers for military service have registered for the army, as the hostile acts by Panama have been taken as a declaration of war. Assertion is made that Coto is on the Costa Rican side of the frontier, and that, in occupying the place, Panamanian troops have invaded Costa Rican territory.

Would-Be Safe Crackers Caught In Act

BOSTON, March 4.—An attempt at safe-cracking was surprised early today by police in the South Boston district who captured three men after an exchange of shots in the office of Sumner Crosby & Son, Inc. Thomas Logan, one of the men captured was shot in the left leg and taken to a hospital, two confederates of those caught who apparently had laid low during the gun battle sallied out half an hour later, were seen and pursued, but evaded the shots that were fired and escaped. Three policemen were passing the Crosby grain store when through the dim light they saw men attacking the safe with a pickaxe. The officers rushed in, the cracksmen gave battle, and shots were fired by both. Only one bullet found a mark, that in Logan's leg. He went down and his two companions were overpowered. They gave their names as Vincent Courtney and Nicholas McCann.

Brother of Late Mayor McSwiney Jailed

CORK, March 4.—John (Sean) MacSwiney, brother of the former lord mayor of Cork, was one of 10 men who were sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment here today for raging war against crown forces, being in possession of arms, ammunition and explosives. Another accused man was sentenced to 10 years' penal servitude.

INCREASE IN PAY

Slowey Advocates Increase for Register of Deeds

(Special to The Sun)
STATE HOUSE, Boston, March 4.—Representative Charles H. Slowey appeared before the legislative committee on public service to advocate a small increase in pay for Register of Deeds William C. Purcell.

The proposed increase, he said, merely places Register Purcell on an equality with other registers who are doing the same amount of work. He declared that every attorney who comes into contact with the office of the register would be willing, if requested, to testify to the ability of Mr. Purcell and to the justice of the proposed increase. There was no opposition.

During the absence of Speaker Young at the inauguration ceremonies in Washington, Rep. Victor F. Jewett of Lowell is presiding over the sessions of the house.

Adverse reports were filed in the legislature on the following measures:

Bill providing that in awarding contracts for public work, preference shall be given to citizens of the United States.

Bill providing that in the event of a total loss by fire, the full amount of any insurance policy shall be paid.

Resolve providing for an investigation by a special commission of the rates charged in this state for fire insurance.

Bill authorizing the department of public works to keep certain highways on main through routes open for travel in the winter months;

Bill providing that the "Star Spangled Banner" shall be sung in every public school once each week;

Bill permitting cities and towns to retain the fines received for violations of the motor vehicle laws;

Bill providing for draftees who were discharged from service within thirty days after reporting at a draft camp to be paid a bonus of $50;

Bill prohibiting the giving of tips or gratuities to employees of hotels, restaurants, barber shops or other public places.

The house accepted adverse committee reports on these measures:

Bill repealing the law providing that when a strike is in progress, advertisements for help in the plant shall so state;

Bill providing for the establishment of a court of industrial relations to prevent strikes on public utilities;

Bill permitting the use of arming for athletic contests of high schools;

Bill to regulate the charges which may be made by hotels and restaurants for food. H. O. P.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Board Will Discuss Americanization Problems With Representatives of American Legion at Special Meeting

At a special meeting of the school committee this evening, representatives of Lowell post, 67, American Legion, will be present to discuss problems of Americanization and methods of co-operation between the Legion and the school board. Undoubtedly, the Legion representatives will also seek co-operation from the school board in the matter of vocational training of war veterans.

Mother!

Look at Child's tongue

Give "California Syrup of Figs" only—Say "California"

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. Give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs" and in a few hours all the constipated, poisonous, undigested food and sour bile gently pass without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless laxative, because it never fails. Children dearly love its delicious, "fruity" taste. Full directions for babies and for children of all ages printed on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits. Mother, you must say "California." If you don't say "California" you may get an imitation fig syrup—Advt.

Liquor Squad Find Stills, and Moonshine in Summer Street House

The case of John Fernandez of Summer street, charged with illegally keeping liquor for purposes of sale, was continued to tomorrow morning in the police court today. Government witnesses being absent. The defendant spent last night in the police station after he had been taken into custody by the liquor squad and other officers. Fernandez is a large, full, and well-developed man, moonshine in his possession. A friend who visited him shortly after his arrest failed to secure the 1500 bottles, which were found, and were continued today. Fernandez insisted last night and this morning that the liquor was for his own use, and he testified that he had no fortune in being confined. He told the court that he is out of work and has three children. Officers Winn, Moore, Conroy, O'Sullivan, Clark and Kavanagh engineered the raid.

HARDING'S FIRST ACT

President Breaks Precedent—Submits Cabinet List in Person—All Confirmed

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Breaking a precedent which has stood since the days of Washington and Jefferson, President Harding appeared today at an executive session of the senate to present nominations of his cabinet officers. Within less than 10 minutes after he had finished his address of five minutes, the senate had confirmed all 10 nominations.

Senator Fall of New Mexico, named for secretary of the interior, was first on the list to be confirmed. He was given precedence because of his senate membership.

The other appointments were taken up in turn. The new president submitted no other nominations besides his cabinet officers and in presenting those to the senate said he desired to "maintain close and amicable relations" with the legislative body during his administration and had, therefore, presented the nominations in person.

WALL STREET APPROVES INAUGURAL

NEW YORK, March 4.—Wall street shifted its attention during the noon hour today to Washington, centering its interest on President Harding's inaugural address.

The president's recommendations regarding adequate credit facilities, readjustment of war taxes and reduction of abnormal expenditures as published in preliminary form on the tickers, met with unqualified approval. Shortly took advantage of the full in the trading, however, again to depress prices. Cris, shipping, steel, equipments and motors eased 1 to 3/4 points from their highest quotations of the forenoon.

BIRTHDAY PARTY
At the home of Mr. Frank Cassie, 105 Thore avenue, Dracut, last night, a very enjoyable birthday party was held in honor of Miss Alice Cassie's fifteenth birthday. There was a large number of friends of the little girl present and the entertainment program carried out was thoroughly appreciated. Miss Alice and her friends, Thomas Vickers gave an exhibition dance and Mr. Ernest Guenard a violin solo, both of which were well received. A quartet composed of Messrs. Cassie, Guenard, Stockton and H. Guenard contributed several pleasing selections. The Misses Cassie and Meskalla participated in an appropriate dialogue. At the close of the entertainment a very hearty lunch was served by Mrs. Cassie. Dancing was enjoyed throughout the evening.

Harding Inaugurated

of other years when it has been illuminated by the uniforms of West Point cadets, shipbuilders from Annapolis and troops.

Plea For Return to "Normalcy"
Pledging his faith anew to American institutions, President Harding reiterated a plea for a return to "normalcy" for industrial peace, for friendship with the world and spoke again a promise to work for an association of nations to bring about peace and "approximate" disarmament.

He coupled his renewed declarations with a fresh pronouncement against "entangling alliances."

"America," he said, "can enter into no political commitments, nor assume any economic obligations which will subject our decisions to any other than our own authority."

No Entangling Alliances
"I am sure our people will not understand nor will the world misunderstand. We have no thought to impede the paths to closer relationship. We wish to promote understanding. We want to do our part to make offensive warfare so hateful that governments and people who resort to it must have the righteousness of their cause before them as outlaws before the bar of civilization."

Then speaking of his latest determination to enter no "entangling alliances," Mr. Harding declared: "This is not selfishness, it is sanity. It is not aloofness, it is security. It is not suspicion of others, it is patriotic adherence to the things which made us what we are."

Immediately at the conclusion of the inaugural address, the small party reformed and took motor cars back to the White House, escorted by the cavalry troops which had brought it to the capitol.

Mr. Harding read from a finely printed manuscript cut in small sheets and held in the hollow of his left hand. He kept on his dark blue overcoat during the address.

Crowds Applaud Speech
President Harding took the oath at the exact minute of the day that Woodrow Wilson was sworn in for his first term eight years ago.

The first applause followed the new president's declaration that the republic must pursue a policy of non-involvement in the old world affairs. As he spoke the sentences which followed

There were more cheers when the president delivered his condemnation of war profiteering. He then had been speaking for about 15 minutes and was half way through his manuscript.

In the midst of his address, Mr. Harding departed from his prepared manuscript to make reference to the group of wounded soldiers just below the inaugural stand. He assured them that "this republic will never be ungrateful for the services you have rendered," and added that he hoped for a policy which would adequately provide in the future for those wounded in war time.

President Harding concluded his address at 1:55 p. m., after talking nearly 37 minutes.

Hour of Applause
There was another hour of applause as he concluded and turned to receive the congratulations of those on the inaugural stand. Vice President Coolidge was the first to shake hands with him. As the president and Mrs. Harding started from the stand the national band played a stanza of "America" and the crowd began to disperse and the inauguration was over.

BRIAND PAYS TRIBUTE TO WOODROW WILSON

LONDON, March 4.—Mr. Briand, the French premier, commenting on the retirement of Woodrow Wilson from the presidency, said today: "France will cherish eternal gratitude to the United States for having so powerfully contributed to the victory of right and justice in the world. The name of the eminent statesman who took the responsibility for the intervention of America in the great war is inseparable from the victory and will remain equally engraved upon French hearts."

"We know the generous idealism which animated the American policy and which has always inspired the high personages called to the supreme magistracy. I know that President Harding will be for the sister republic a friend as sure as large in spirit and as devoted to the triumph of right as his illustrious predecessor."

NEW VICE PRESIDENT

Coolidge First From Massachusetts Since Wilson Served With Grant

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Calvin Coolidge is the first Massachusetts man to hold the office of vice-president since Henry Wilson served in the second Grant administration nearly half a century ago. His advent into office adds to the prominence of his state in national government affairs for it is regarded as almost certain that Senator Henry Cabot Lodge will be again chosen as republican leader in the senate, and Rep. Frederick H. Gillett as speaker of the house.

Should Mr. Gillett succeed himself, a Massachusetts man will preside over each branch of congress, a most unusual coincidence. More unusual still is the fact that both Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Gillett come from the same congressional district, Northampton, the home of the vice-president being in the same district as Springfield, the home of the speaker. Both men are graduates of Amherst college.

Vice-President Coolidge is entering upon his first service in the field of national politics, but for 29 years he has been active in the political service of his state, rising from membership in the council of his city to governor of the commonwealth.

In some respects Mr. Coolidge is a figure strange in American public life, being taciturn to a degree and apparently shunning the spot light and the glamour which usually surrounds high public officials. To his most intimate friends he is known as "Silent Cal." It is related in illustration of this characteristic that a personal and political friend who had conferred with him in his executive offices at Boston without receiving more than monosyllabic answers finally quit the office in disgust, exclaiming as he came out: "By George, I'd like to be that fellow's stenographer."

But after all, holding public office comes naturally enough to the new vice-president. For generations, ever since his forebears settled in Waterbury, Mass., in 1639 and later went to the rough, backwoods section of Vermont, where he was born on Independence day, 1872, his family has been identified with public affairs. His father served in the Vermont state legislature and on governors' staffs and for years has been known as a sort of unofficial magistrate and counselor in his section. It was the crowning event of the father's life to witness today the inauguration of his son.

By intellectual preference Vice-President Coolidge has since early youth demonstrated a taste for problems of statecraft. As a senior at Amherst he won the $500 gold medal in competition with students of all American colleges for the best essay on an historical subject, which in his case was "The Principles of the American Revolution." Burke and other political leaders of intellectual distinction have always been his favorites and he has studied carefully their writings.

It was this intensive study of affairs of state that first attracted to him the attention of prominent republican leaders notably the late Senator W. Murray Crane of Massachusetts. For a number of years these watched the development of his career with a view to directing him into the national political arena. Their opportunity came when the spectacular Boston police strike during his first term as governor attracted nation-wide attention.

The crisis which was precipitated by the strike, according to these friends, merely revealed the powers and courage of the man, and they frankly and openly seized the opportunity to press for him claims for the republican presidential nomination at Chicago last June. They pointed out that as counselor in his home city and later as city solicitor and mayor, as a member of both branches of the legislature including a term as president of the senate and then as lieutenant-governor and finally as governor he had been elected with ever increasing majorities culminating in the vote of confidence after the police strike when he was again elected governor by a plurality of 126,000.

Probably the most attractive part of Mr. Coolidge is his home life. Ever since his marriage, 15 years ago, to Miss Grace Goodhue, of Burlington, Vt., a University of Vermont graduate whom he met as a school teacher in Northampton, he has lived a quiet, modest life, most of the time in the shadow of Smith college in a house which he has rented for $32.50 a month. "Save, no matter what your salary may be," has always been his motto, and, as he has enjoyed beyond the income earned in public office little more returns from his law practice because of pressure of public duties, he has been obliged and content to live simply. There are two boys in their early teens, but all do their bit, even to mowing the lawn.

Wilson Again Private Citizen

probably pursue, in some unannounced way, his work for world peace. It was thought too, that the outgoing president would take up the business of literature where he left off when he quit the presidency of Princeton university to enter politics and become governor of New Jersey.

Frail in health with his body racked by 18 months of illness it had been supposed by Mr. Wilson's closest friends that he planned nothing else than rest. But, Rear Admiral Grayson, his personal physician, says he is able to take up legal work and could even possibly appear occasionally before the supreme court of the United States to which the retiring president will make application for admission to practice.

The second democratic president since Andrew Jackson to fill two successive terms, Mr. Wilson's eight years in the White House carried him through the range of human emotions. He was almost blindly idolized and cordially hated. Profound peace, the most terrible of wars, death of a wife and help-mate, courtship and marriage and finally lingering illness all came in turn to bright or darken his days. Eight years of it whitened his hair; racked his frame and impaired his physical vigor, but did not rust his mind.

Characterized by his friends as much a wounded veteran of the world war as if he had been shot in battle, he goes back to private life today regarded by his partisans as a living sacrifice to his ideals.

Woodrow Wilson was not a well man when he took up the presidency. He was decidedly a sick man. He was threatened with Bright's disease, which physicians diagnosed as having been brought about by a particular treatment for frequent head colds to which he and the first Mrs. Wilson were subjected. The wife died soon after, but his case yielded to care.

Some years before that, Mr. Wilson had suffered a thrombosis, in one of his legs. It was the lodging of a blood clot in an artery, but because of its location not serious. It was, however, a complaint of the same nature which caused his breakdown in 1913, when the clot formed on the right side of his brain, impairing the control of his left arm and leg.

Almost sightless in one eye. Little known also, is the fact that Mr. Wilson, like Mr. Roosevelt was practically sightless in one of his eyes. Burying blood vessels in the retina practically made it useless, although the impairment was in part overcome by the use of eye glasses. He suffered also from nervous indigestion. With a predisposition to take cold easily added to this list of troubles, Woodrow Wilson took up the arduous duties of the presidency with far less physical equipment than the public generally gave him credit for.

Once in office the round of complexities which brought Mr. Wilson praise on one side and damnation on the other was not long in starting and like a snowball rolling down hill, continued to take on volume until the day of his departure from the White House.

Once, in the midst of his siege of prostration which accompanied the first stages of his present illness, he debated with himself whether he ought not to relinquish his office and give way to a successor. Later when health had improved and the democratic convention at San Francisco was balloting night and day to agree on a presidential nominee, Mr. Wilson debated with himself whether he should be a candidate for a third term. It could not be said that either subject reached the stage of "being considered." But it is known that Mr. Wilson gave the subject some thought.

These with many other things form the highly interesting unwritten chapters of Woodrow Wilson's life. They would make a volume of far more on pressing reading than anything that ever had been written about him.

Might Disprove Break
Such a volume might include the "inside" story of the break with Colonel House, his former confidential adviser; it might tell how Mr. Wilson rousing Mr. Clemenceau, the French premier, from bed at 2 o'clock in the morning, practically charged the French delegates with tampering with the records of the peace conference proceedings.

It might tell how Mr. Wilson made up his mind to "fire" some other cabinet officers soon after the resignation of Secretary Lansing, but desisted because, he said, it would only add to the popular impression that he could not get along with anybody.

LAST CALL

Positively the Final Week of My Twelfth Anniversary Sale

At 9.30 tomorrow night the curtain goes down on the most successful tailoring event staged in New England.

When this sale ends more than 3000 yards of fine custom tailored woollens will be disposed of at less than weavers' cost.

There never has been a sale to equal this one held in any Lowell store.

And there never can be—unless some merchant is willing to sacrifice all his retail profit and induce the wholesaler and mill man to part with a good share of theirs.

1000 buyers have attended this sale in the past week—a testimonial to the alert trading judgment of Lowell clothing buyers.

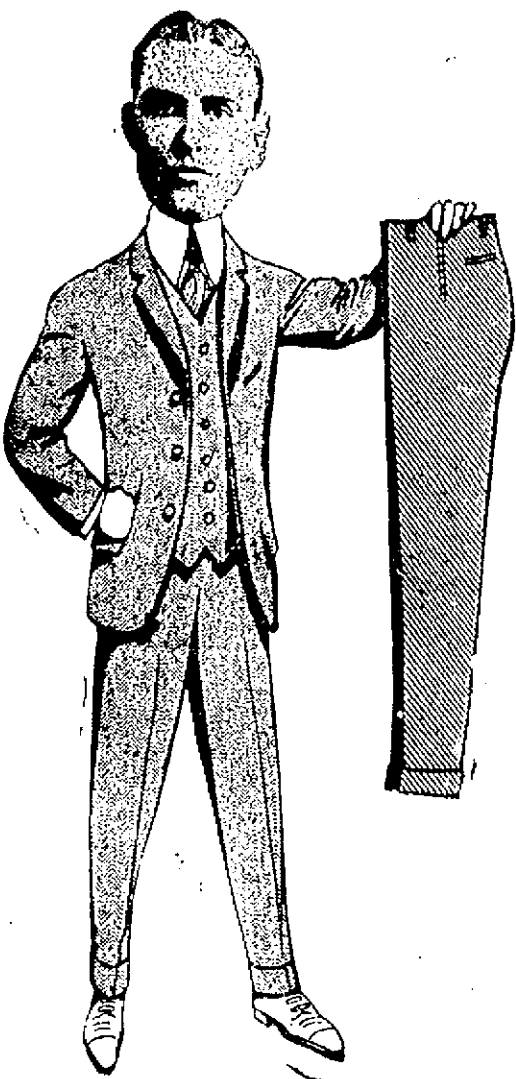

Yet don't think that all of the best selections are gone. That's not so. The yardage is small—that is true—but it's sufficient to take care of two more days of record-breaking business.

The curtain is still up—and it will remain so until the old tower clock on City Hall sounds the curfew hour of this sale at 9.30 Saturday night next.

P. S.—EASTER SUNDAY ONLY FOUR WEEKS AWAY

"Said with a smile" to Lloyd George concerning the relative strengths of the British and American navies, and it might disclose that Mr. Wilson went to the peace conference prepared to withdraw, as he threatened to do, in its midst.

All these things, however, if they do become public, probably will do so by the pen of the historian after Woodrow Wilson has been assigned to his proper niche in the wall of history. While the principal actors in that series of dramas live, all these things are likely to remain behind the scenes. Mr. Wilson's retirement to private life is not likely to release them for public consumption.

Moral Leader of the World
Until the beginning of the world war Mr. Wilson held the attention of the country with his swift strokes at getting legislation from congress. With the coming of the war he devoted the last two years of his first term to an attempt to keep the United States out of the conflict, and as the seemingly inevitable drift toward war set in, he gradually assumed the diplomatic leadership of the nations arrayed against Germany and her allies, and finally assumed what his partisans characterized as the moral leadership of the world.

During the diplomatic correspondence with Germany he displayed many keenly human emotions.

On May 7, 1915, when Mr. Wilson heard the news of the sinking of the Lusitania, he was almost at the end of his patience. Like a man making a last effort to avoid a quarrel with a wife who has just laid on the last straw, he stepped on his hat and went out and walked around the block. He knew how dangerous it was to his country, and other nations, and has been known to say something stronger than the "tit-tut" which has been accredited to him on having made a face pass at golf. However, cold and austere he may have been accounted in his dealings with public men, these who have been privileged to view his family life from the inside of the circle testify that he is intensely human.

To Remain in Washington

What part he may take in public affairs in the future, living as he will almost under the shadow of the dome of the capitol, is causing lively speculation. So far as the records show, no other president has remained in Washington after going out of office. Mr. Wilson first intended to live in Baltimore. He and the present Mrs. Wilson settled it, by playing a game

the president invented during an idle hour on the steamer George Washington on one of the trips to and from the peace conference. It was a game of percentages with certain scores allotted to the various advantages or disadvantages of life of which both were most fond. Baltimore, as the game worked out, had the highest. But breakdown and continued illness intervened and it was decided to remain in Washington, where almost all of Mr. Wilson's family reside.

The new home, bought recently, is on an elevation in the northwest residence section not far from a site long held by the Imperial German government for embassy. Mr. Wilson expects to spend the future almost on the spot where the Kaiser expected his ambassador to sit.

Because of the secrecy which has been thrown around his physical condition, the country is probably most interested in that just now. Mr. Wilson is convalescent—so far as nature permits—from what medically is called thrombosis—a blood clot in one of the arteries on the right side of his brain which impairs the motor nerves in the left arm and leg. He can walk short distances alone with the aid of a cane; longer distances require the use of a wheel chair. Walking up and down stairs is a precarious experiment seldom attempted.

Stricken While Alone

Mr. Wilson was not stricken on the League of Nations speaking trip in the west as is popularly supposed, but within a week after his return to the White House. Warning signals of the coming attack were what caused his return. For three days after he came back he seemed to be improving; in fact he took a motor ride the day before he was laid low and on the night before he played billiards. The seizure came in the night, at an hour when the president was alone, and he was found stricken just before daylight.

For a week his life was despaired of, but his real condition was kept secret by his family. Then came a turn for the better and for many weeks the president was confined to his bed a bed in which Abraham Lincoln before him probably had passed away a night of pain and sleeplessness of a different nature. Even the White House barber was not admitted to the room, and Mr. Wilson, usually clean shaven, grew a beard and made his morning remarks to his physicians and family as he brushed it for amusement several times a day.

Just Escaped Operation

In the midst of the illness, it was looked for muscular complications set in and refused to yield to treatment. While physicians and surgeons anxiously consulted, doubtless as to whether the president's physical condition would stand the shock of a surgical operation and had about decided that it was a life or death chance, a nurse arrived with the news that nature had intervened and that the operation would be unnecessary. From that moment slow recovery set in.

Motor nerves which had refused to respond to needles pricks showed signs of reaction. Pretty soon Mr. Wilson was about in a wheel chair. A few weeks later he was learning to walk again with the support of an attendant. Massage, electricity and everything known to science were employed to coax his muscular faculties back into action. Then he got out of doors for motor rides and received guests. He took up a routine of a few hours' work each day dictating to stenographers and increased the time as strength gathered.

One evening he surprised Washington by going to the theatre walking only with the aid of a cane which he humorously called "my third leg." He probably never will play golf again and may never deliver another public speech, although he will write what he has to say, in what extended measure no one knows. His friends say it may be a large one.

Washington will now have a president and one of the two living ex-presidents on its hands and officialdom is very much interested to see how it will work out.

129 LEAVE CONGRESS HER IMPROVEMENT Members of Senate and House Retired Today to Private Life

WASHINGTON, March 4.—One hundred and twenty-nine members of the house and senate retired today to private life. Most of them went out in the back wash from the tidal wave which swept the republican party into full control of all the functions of the government, but some few, republicans as well as democrats, elected not to run again for their seats.

One or two of the republicans may become active in the Harding administration, but the great majority will know public life no more for two years, at least, and many for a longer period, if ever.

Champ Clark, one of those who would have retired today, was claimed by death two days before the session ended. A distinctive character among the outgoing members was Senator Lawrence V. Sherman, republican, Illinois, who did not offer himself for re-election.

The actual number of house members retiring was 115, but three of these—McKinley of Illinois, Harrell of Oklahoma, republicans, and Caraway of Arkansas, democrat, go to the other end of the capital as senators. McKinley's house record was 14 years.

The political landslide of Nov. '20 gave the republicans a much larger working majority in the house—too big in the opinion of some leaders. The new extra session expected to be called soon will start with 391 republicans, 132 democrats and one socialist.

The lone prohibitionist in the closing congress under which the country went dry was beaten. There is one man shy—Pennyman of Pennsylvania. The republican vacancy caused by the death of the member-elect will not be filled until fall.

The new senate, which convened today in special session to act on nominations by President Harding, contains 59 republicans and 37 democrats, giving the republicans a majority of 22 as against only two majority during most of the last congress, when the lineup generally was 50 republicans and 47 democrats.

The seating of the two republicans in January in place of democrats gave the former a slightly larger working margin during the last few weeks.

For the second time in history the house will have a woman member, Miss Alice C. Robertson, of the second Oklahoma district, who succeeds William W. Hastings.

For the first time in the history of the house the territory east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio rivers will dominate legislation, republicans from that area being in full control and strong enough to overcome all combinations of republicans and democrats from the south and west.

Many places formerly held by veterans were captured by men young in years and politics, but some veteran politicians came in, among them Theodore Burton of Ohio, a former senator, and Bourke Cockran of New York.

The late Champ Clark is to be succeeded by a man new in congress. Although his service was not continuous, Mr. Clark's total time was 25 years, running third in that respect to Cannon and Speaker Gillett. Two Tennessee democrats—Sims and Moon—turned over their desks to younger men after coming here together 21 years ago.

Two leading democrats on the ways and means committee which must frame a tariff law, Henry T. Rainey of Illinois and Hull of Tennessee—marched out, Rainey after 15 years and Hull 11. Sherwood of Ohio, who went into the union army as a private and came out a brigadier general, retired with 16 years marked on his legislative gun, the same mark set by Goldfogle of New York, whose place was taken by Meyer London, the only socialist winner in November. Other prominent democrats retiring were Scott Ferris, Oklahoma, and Bee, Texas, brother-in-law of the retiring postmaster general Burleson.

The delegations from 14 states, many of them with small representation, remained unchanged. Gallivan and Tague, both of Boston, stood up as the sole and solid democratic representation from all of New England. Ohio, the state of presidential nominees, sent a solid republican delegation.

Thus far there have been no indications of a determined fight to oust Speaker Gillett, or the republican leader, Mondell. Kitchin, long ill and absent, is slated for democratic leader, the job he held while Clark was speaker.

Prominent among the 12 democratic and two republican senators retiring today is Senator Sherman, former democratic chairman of the military committee; Gronna, North Dakota, former republican chairman of the agriculture committee; and Hiram Bingham, Connecticut, who was succeeded by a man new in congress.

TALK OF FRIENDS

Lowell Woman Gains in Strength and Never Feels Tired Any More Since Taking Tanlac, She Says

"Tanalac has helped me so much that all my friends are talking about the improvement in my condition," said Mrs. A. J. Hildebrand, 219 Hildreth St., Lowell, recently.

"At the time I began taking it my system seemed to be in an awful rundown condition. I had lost considerable weight, and was so weak the least bit of housework was an effort to me. I had that tired, worn-out feeling all the time, and my face was so pale I didn't look at all like myself. My back ached just like toothache, and worried me all the time."

"But Tanlac certainly has made me feel like a different person. I have gained in weight and strength until I feel better than I have in a long time, and never feel tired and run-down any more. My color has come back, too, and my back never hurts like it used to. In fact, I wouldn't take anything on earth for what Tanlac has done for me."

Tanalac is sold in Lowell by Green's Drug store, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative, by Wright Drug Co., Billerica, Mass., and by the leading druggist in every town.—Adv.

Other retiring members were Beckham, Kentucky; Gay, Louisiana; Johnson, South Dakota; Kirby, Arkansas; Henderson, Nevada; Smith, Arizona; Smith, Maryland; and Phelan, California, all democrats.

Another retiring notable was Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall, who will go on Chautauqua circuit next week. He will sail for Europe in May to remain until fall.

Of the 14 new senators who took their seats today, 11 were republicans and three democrats. The republicans were: Ralph H. Cameron, Arizona; Samuel M. Shortridge, California; Samuel D. Nicholson, Colorado; William R. McKinley, Illinois; Richard P. Ernst, Kentucky; Ovington E. Wetler, Maryland; former Governor Tasker L. Odell, Nevada; E. F. Ladd, North Dakota; former Rep. J. W. Harrell, Oklahoma; Robert N. Stanford, Oregon; and former Governor Peter Norbeck, South Dakota.

The democrats were: Former Rep. T. H. Caraway, Arkansas; Thomas E. Watson, Georgia; and Edwin S. Broussard, Louisiana.

For more than thirty years Mr. Harding's bread and butter has been earned by the Marion Star, whose responsibilities he assumed under heavy mortgage and whose early years he nourished at the expense of going hungry more than once himself. Since his nomination for the presidency he has faced only one public ordeal that aroused emotions he could not master. That was the temporary severance of the ties that bind him to the Star. On election night, when a group of his employees came to congratulate him, his voice broke and his big frame was shaken by sobs when he undertook to speak of the separation that must be the price of his triumph.

Election day was Mr. Harding's fifty-fifth birthday, and all the interests of his lifetime had been rooted in the immediate vicinity of Marion. He was born at Blooming Grove, O., in an adjoining county, the son of a country doctor, George T. Harding, who still visits his patients about Marion in the one-horse carriage of the old-school practitioner. The new president's mother has been dead for many years and his father is remarried.

Young Harding attended college at Oberlin, O., and then tried school teaching for a year before he began his newspaper career. Always a partisan and a republican, he lost his job as a reporter by wearing in the pages of his democratic editor a "dialine hat," the stove-pipe which was a badge of support of James G. Blaine.

Although it was a pioneer newspaper, Mr. Harding's mind ran to progressive notions even in the day when the Star still was a liability. He broke with his first partner over the question of installing a telephone in the newspaper office, a proposal which the partner held to be impractical, extravagant and revolutionary. Although he retains a controlling financial interest in the Star, now a successful newspaper, Mr. Harding will occupy but a titular relationship to it during his presidency.

Three times before he has held public office. He served in the Ohio legislature and as lieutenant governor of his state, and six years ago he was elected to the United States senate, where he became a member of the foreign relations committee. In 1916 he was chairman of the Republican national convention.

In personal appearance the new president is a man to attract a second look in any crowd. He carries his two hundred and ten pounds without a hint of obesity, although he is not quite six feet tall, and his massive features round out an impression of force and distinction. His hair is iron grey, almost silver grey, making sharp contrast with the unusually heavy black eyebrows that almost mask a pair of calm grey eyes. It is only in repose that his face takes on the aspect of severity seen so often in his photographs. When he talks or listens the lines are broken by a smile that radiates cordiality.

President Harding walks slowly, talks slowly, and makes up his mind slowly; but he gives the impression of polished deliberation rather than of over-caution or abashment. He is a keen conversationalist and a good listener, and has a faculty of getting through embarrassing situations with little show of embarrassment.

As an orator Mr. Harding never has rated himself as witty or eloquent, though he attained considerable success a few years ago on the Chautauqua platform. He seldom attempts fine word pictures or humorous passages, but cultivates a deliberate, unembellished utterance.

He never gives the impression of stiff dignity. He likes to know men well enough to call them by their first names and to slap them on the back when he meets them. He likes to shake hands and make conversation about the weather and the crops, and when he does he usually lapses into the vernacular of an Ohio countryman.

It is Mr. Harding's affability that has made for officials close to him some of their hardest problems. He never likes to refuse an audience or to terminate a conference until his visitor has talked himself out. On his first campaign trip his managers ruled that time and endurance would not permit him to appear at railway stations, but after the train had whizzed past the first waiting crowd he ordered that a stop be made wherever the people had come out expecting to see him.

The new president is unusually fond of children, though he has none of his own. He is a life-long Baptist and a trustee of his home church in Marion. He has been a member of the E. K. and Moose fraternities for years, and since his election to the presidency has become a 32d degree Mason and a Shriner. Golf is his favorite recreation and he likes to fish but does not hunt. He plays hard and possesses the faculty of putting all his worries out of his mind during vacation hours.

Of all the presidents, Mr. Harding's close friends liken him most often to McKinley, with whom he has in common a predominant passion for obliteration of class and sectional lines.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Here are some of the more important of the problems, international and domestic, facing the Harding administration:

International:—
Peace with Germany.
Final disposition of the treaties of Versailles and St. Germaine.
Decision as to the entry of the United States into an Association of Nations.
International disarmament.
The Japanese California question.
The Russian question, including trade with Soviet Russia.
Recognition of Mexico.
Negotiation of new treaties, diplomatic and commercial, with Germany and Austria and with the new nations, Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia.
Japanese occupation of Siberia.
Treaty with Colombia.
Disposition of the former German cables now held by the allies.
Recognition of the new Greek government and settlement of the status of the Greek loan.
Loans to allied countries, including funding of the British and other debts to the United States.
The Anglo-French world oil agreement.

FRED HOWARD, THE DRUGGIST

FIRST LADY OF LAND

Mrs. Harding Possesses Unusual Degree of Pluck and Outspokenness

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Florence Kling Harding, the new First Lady of the Land, possesses an unusual degree of pluck and outspokenness. She has ideas of her own on many subjects and she does not hesitate to speak her opinions straight out from the shoulder. Those who work for her count her a kindly and delightful mistress, but they know that any delinquency will call down a reprimand they will not soon forget. On occasions she has been seen shaking a forefinger at her husband—but of course nobody knows what that all is about.

All her life Mrs. Harding has been a determined and tireless worker, not only in the details of her household, but in the broader field of business and community welfare. She comes of fighting blood, her father, Amos Kling, having been a rugged power of the pioneer days of Marion. She was born there, and although in her girlhood her parents attained to moderate means they were not the sort who lean to extravagance.

When she married Mr. Harding in 1891, his newspaper, the Star, was not yet out of the woods financially and she went to work in the business department. She applied herself to advertising and circulation problems with an eye for efficiency all along the line. She watched the original purchases of print paper and materials and she stood at the presses and gave instructions to the newsboys daily before they started on their rounds with the finished product.

It is said of her in Marion that when she became the wife of the struggling young editor she told her friends she expected to make him president some day, and it is known that at some of the most discouraging stages of the pre-convention campaign last year it was she who insisted most vigorously that the fight be continued.

During the strenuous days when thousands were coming to the front porch of the Harding residence on Mt. Vernon avenue she was the most active figure about her husband's headquarters. She was beside him every time he spoke at home or away; she shook hands with as many men and women as did he; and she was in and out of his offices from morning until night, rounding up details and giving him advice on all serious questions before him.

Late on the night of the last front porch meeting a newspaperman passing the Harding home saw someone moving about the dark recesses of the big veranda. It was Mrs. Harding, drawing her porch chairs back against the wall for the night and softly whistling a quiet little air of contentment. "You seem happy enough," he called across to her.

"I surely am," she replied, "and why shouldn't I be? Isn't it wonderful?"

Mrs. Harding is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and the Harding alternate attendance between that and the Baptist church, of which the new president is a member. She loves children and chooses horses and dogs for her pets. Cruel treatment of dumb animals arouses her to militant protests, and on more than one occasion she has stopped on the streets of Marion and Washington to reprimand a drayman or a caddy for abusing his horse. In her younger days she was a skilled horsewoman.

Of medium height, the new First Lady carries herself erect and with a charming dignity. Pictures seldom do her justice, for although her hair is streaked with silver her eyes are as bright and her stances and smiles as radiant as when she was sixteen.

Review of the 66th Congress

war after President Wilson had appealed to the country in 1915 to return a democratic majority to congress, the republicans organized all committees at the opening session in 1919 and immediately launched an attack on the administration. This centered around the treaty of Versailles, which was taken up in the senate before it was signed at Paris.

Other acts of the administration which came in for criticism included the sending of troops to Russia, the handling of deportation cases and the winding up of war contracts. Investigations of many phases of war activities also were undertaken and continued through most of the nearly two years of life of this first republican congress in eight years.

Four vetoes of important measures by the president also were overridden by the sixty-sixth congress. The measures repassed after their disapproval by Mr. Wilson included the prohibition enforcement act and joint resolutions reducing the size of the regular army to 175,000 men, repealing the daylight savings law and reviving the war finance corporation. In the case of one important matter, the Knox resolution to declare the state of war with Germany at an end, the presidential veto stood.

Besides the war inquiries, many others were conducted, including those into the 1919 steel strike, the spread of radical propaganda, the coal and housing situations, the controversy between Secretary Daniels and Rear Admiral Sims over naval medal awards, campaign expenditures, shipping board operations, the Ford-Newberry election, radical deportation cases, and the escape to Germany of Grover Cleveland Bergdahl, Philadelphia draft evader.

International disarmament was a subject occupying much attention at the closing session, inquiries being conducted by both house and senate committees. Final action was deferred and the whole question left over to the Harding administration. The senate naval committee recommended, however, that there be no halting of American naval program.

Important measures passed by the

To Reduce Dangerous Varicose Veins

People who have swollen veins or bunches should not wait until they reach the bursting point, which means much suffering and loss of time, but should at once secure from any reliable druggist a two-ounce original bottle of Moore's Liniment Oil (full strength). By using this powerful, yet harmless, germicide treatment, improvement is noticed in a few days and by its regular use swollen veins will return to their normal size, and sufferers will cease to worry. Moore's Liniment Oil treatment is used by physicians and in hospitals and is guaranteed to accomplish results or money returned.

It reduces all kinds of enlarged glands, gotters and warts and is used exclusively in many large factories as an antidote for first aid to the injured as well as for the treatment of all kinds of skin diseases. sixty-sixth congress, besides the prohibition enforcement law, the surface amendment, and the resolution to revive the war finance corporation included:

The transportation act.
The merchant marine act.
The Edge bill for foreign finance corporations.

The oil and gas leasing law.
The army transportation act.
The water power development bill.
A bill abolishing the United States Housing corporations.

In addition the usual annual supply measures were put through and preliminary ground work was laid by the house of ways and means committee for revising both the tariff and tax laws.

There were three sessions of the sixty-sixth congress. The first, an extraordinary one called by President Wilson by cable from Paris after failure of some of the big appropriation measures in the preceding congress, met on May 19, 1919, and continued just six months, to Nov. 19. The second session, a normal one, began on Nov. 1, 1919, and continued to June 3, 1920, ending just before the national political convention. The third and final session began Jan. 19, 1921, including the sessions during the war and earlier, congress had been sitting virtually in continuous session for a decade.

The Versailles treaty was the great point of contention during both the first and second sessions. It was twice debated, first on Nov. 19, 1919, and again on March 17, 1920, when, by a vote of 47 to 37, it was returned to President Wilson. The Knox resolution to end the state of war with Germany then was adopted and, on May 27, 1920, killed by a presidential veto.

The treaty debate began May 23, 1919, four days after the new congress convened. The treaty was reported to the senate, with Lodge reservations.

At the second session, republican conferees of senate leaders failed to bring an agreement on reservations and, with debate renewed in February, 1920, the final vote on ratification March 19 was 49 to 35, less than the two-thirds majority. The national presidential conventions and the popular "solemn referendum" followed. No effort was made to obtain action on the treaty during the session which ended today.

The first session was signalized by efforts to deal with the high cost of living. At that session also congress conferred the permanent rank of general upon General Pershing, but has declined to pass bills giving Major Crowder, former protest marshal general, the rank of lieutenant general. Bills to give permanent rank of admiral to Rear Admirals Benson and Sims also failed.

Also during the first session, Victor H. Brown, the Wisconsin socialist, was elected by the house, and, during the second session, he again was elected a seat after his re-election at a special election.

At the second session, the house passed bills to provide a bonus for war veterans and to amend the tariff and internal revenue laws to abolish luxury and other taxes, but they failed in the senate, which at that session also rejected President Wilson's proposal for an American mandate over Armenia.

The third and last session was devoted principally to appropriation bills, with economy as the watchword. Huge slashes were made in departmental estimates by the sub-committees of the enlarged house appropriations committee which for the first time handled all of the regular supply measures.

PAPPAS THREATENED

Tells Court Suvolos Said,
"I'll Blow Off Your
Feathers"

"I'll blow off your feathers," Harry Suvolos is charged with saying to Andrew Pappas, at the same time drawing a revolver. When Suvolos appeared in the police court today on charges of threatening bodily harm, Pappas testified to the remark, which he explained, means in plain English, "I'll blow off your brains." Pappas told of being on his way home from work with the defendant, who lives on the same street with him in Collingwood, when the latter began to call him names which he was "ashamed to express" before the court. "I walked away from him," said Pappas, "but he followed me." According to the witness, the defendant approached within arms' length, and Pappas, who was alone at home, threatened to burn his house and him with it.

Suvolos had a different version of things. According to his narration, he had trouble with Pappas some months ago, and since then the complainant and his wife have improved the occasions of his passing by their home to address remarks of a derogatory character to him. He was seeking an explanation of these verbal assaults, he said, when he was made a target for stones hurled by Mrs. Pappas. He decided to draw a revolver in a threatening manner, and placed the muzzle of the business on Mr. and Mrs. Pappas.

He was, however, found guilty, after Judge Enright held a conference with a district officer as to his general reputation in the community. The case was continued two weeks for sentence and he was warned that if he had any trouble with the complainant in the interim he would be despatched to the house of correction.

John Fleming, on parole from the state farm, pleaded guilty to drunkenness in the police court this morning and was held in $300 bonds for sentence tomorrow. Judge Enright indicated that the defendant will be returned to the state farm. Officer Thomas H. Maroney made the arrest.

IN PAWTUCKETVILLE

There will be no new Catholic parish in Pawtucketville, not for the present, at least, according to an announcement by Cardinal O'Connell this week. The section of the district, which it was expected would be set apart as a French Catholic parish, is to remain under the jurisdiction of the Oblate fathers of St. Joseph's.

According to present arrangements, masses will be celebrated in the new chapel on Fourth avenue by Oblate fathers every Sunday, beginning probably a week from next Sunday. It was expected that the church would be ready for services tomorrow, but the pastor of St. Joseph's, Rev. Eugene J. Turcotte, O.M.I., informed The Sun today that it will be impossible to celebrate mass there next Sunday, but if all is in readiness he expects the first service will be held a week from Sunday.

The movement for a new church for the French Catholics of Pawtucketville was started about eight years ago at which time a committee of prominent residents was appointed to take the necessary steps for the establishment of a parish in that district. Some time ago Rev. J. B. Labossiere, pastor of St. Louis' church, was delegated by the cardinal to make a survey within the boundary lines of Pawtucketville and his report was to the effect that they numbered over 500.

Several weeks ago work was started on the building of an addition to the parochial school in Fourth avenue, which would serve as a chapel pending the erection of a permanent church and this week the prominent Cardinal O'Connell notified the pastor of St. Joseph's that until further notice that district would remain attached to St. Joseph's parish. The pastor was also authorized to celebrate mass in the chapel as soon as it is completed.

Rev. J. B. Labossiere stated today under present arrangements there will be no separate parish in Pawtucketville, but masses will be celebrated in the new chapel every Sunday. Other church ceremonies, such as christenings, marriages and funeral masses, will be performed as usual at St. Jean Baptiste church.

THE "ETERNAL LIGHT"

The "Eternal Light," a photograph of the life of our Saviour, to be presented at the opening of Mass in the new chapel under the auspices of the C.Y.M.L. next Saturday promises to draw one of the largest audiences of the season. Already the capacity for two performances has been sold and the boys are working on the third for the remainder of the week. The children will witness the marvellous picture in the morning at 10 o'clock, and invitations are extended to the various organizations of the city in order that the children of these institutions may have an opportunity likewise to see the picture. The performance for the adults will be at 2:30 and 8 o'clock. An added attraction will be the singing of Mr. William Kelley of Boston, a celebrated church tenor soloist, who will give a program of sacred numbers in connection with the picture. His selections will include "Noel," "Calvary," "The Lord is My Light," "Nazareth," and others. He will be accompanied by Mr. Henry Forrest of this city.

RIVER ICE BREAKING

The ice on the Merrimack river from the Pawtucket falls to a point opposite the plant of the John A. Meyer Thermal Co. is broken and the water is flowing freely over the dam. It is rather early for the ice to be broken up, but this is due to the late ice cutting and the mild weather of the past week.

For that little

household burn

There is nothing better than Resinol to relieve the smart and sting. Its gentle medication soothes while it heals. Apply freely but gently to the affected surface, so as not to disturb the injured skin. Then place a light bandage over the burn to keep out the air. Resinol Ointment hastens the healing—an important point—as broken skin means an opportunity for germs to enter, and if they do they often cause painful and dangerous inflammation.

HEAVY LOSS IN
CARBARN FIRES

BOSTON, March 4.—A fire of unknown origin which caused damage estimated at $400,000 partly destroyed the car barn of the Boston Elevated Railway Co., in Amory street, in a congested residential district here today.

Forty-six persons, occupying houses opposite the blazing structure, were guided through smoke-filled rooms to safety by the police. There were 45 cars burned.

Firemen fighting the flames were imperilled by live wires dangling in the street and two high power electric transformers in an adjoining building occupied by a lighting company. This was the second carbarn fire in this city within two weeks. Loss in the previous fire was $650,000.

Flames were discovered in the Amory street barn by a passerby shortly before daylight. So quickly did the blaze spread that fire was bursting the two tenement houses across the street when the firemen arrived.

While rescuers were being made in the scorched dwellings, scores of persons rushed from houses on the street in the rear of the fire, and many moved their household goods to the sidewalk. A large building occupied by a manufacturing company a few yards away from the carbarn was saved by a series of water curtains. It is said that the damage to stock from water will be heavy.

Volunteers were among the employees of the railway company helped in driving cars through flames to safety.

Although handicapped by lack of water as the hydrants in front of the barn could not be reached because of the flames, the firemen saved one section of the structure. The fire alarm signal box nearly was put out of commission by a burst of flame and the second and fourth alarms had to be sent from points some distance from the fire.

BUREAU OF NAVIGATION

In accordance with a despatch from the bureau of navigation, March 3, the following ratings are now open for re-enlistment of ex-naval service men, not rated under continuous service: immediate master, temporary first, second and third class; gunners' mates (torpedoes), chief, first, second and third class; gunners (general), first, second and third class; gunners (signals), chief, first, second and third class; electricians (radio), chief, first, second and third class; machinists' mates, chief, first and second class; cooper-smiths, first and second class; pharmacists' mates, first and second class. Applicants for re-enlistment must apply at the Boston office, 65 Haver street, for the local recruiting station in Central street is closed.

MORE WHITE POLLS

Two more white poles, denoting car stops, were located at Grand street in front of the Westford street armory today by the street railway company. At the last meeting of the home rule committee it was suggested that the company locate white poles at this point for both the up and down trips, and action today was in accordance with that suggestion.

HARDINGS CALLED
AT WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Woodrow Wilson spent last evening in the White House studying bills and resolutions which had reached him from the capital during the day. He retired later than usual.

Many messages were received congratulating him on his administration of the nation's affairs and carrying good wishes in his return to private life. The names of those sending the messages were not made public, but it was said that several were from abroad.

The president late in the day took his customary automobile ride. He was not accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, who remained behind to superintend the winding up of household affairs. It was on the president's return that Mr. and Mrs. Harding called at the White House.

Tribute to the Dead

Continued

Charles A. Donahue, Frank J. Garvey, Raymond Lavelle, and Joseph P. Donahue, the resolution committee includes the following: Hon. Thomas J. Enright, Attorney William J. White, Max Goldman, William A. Hogan and Patrick J. Reynolds, and Clerk of Court George F. Toye.

Hon. James E. O'Donnell, ex-mayor

of Lowell, and Attorney Daniel J. Donahue spoke in eulogy of the deceased. "I have known John McClure for eighteen years," said Mr. O'Donnell. "In his troubles and his joys, and I do not know of a more genial and pleasant personality. Court clerks, officers and attaches, were always glad to see him, for he never came here without a smile upon his face. I have always envied his wholesome, likable ways, his good wishes, and pleasant disposition." Mr. O'Donnell then moved that the above mentioned committees be appointed.

Donahue spoke after the committee had been chosen. "There is," he said, "no truer saying than that in the midst of life we are in death. It was only a few days ago that I met the deceased, alive and well. He was a man of genial, kindly and gentle disposition. The asperities of the profession disturbed him little. Combined with his kindly and lovable character was a keen and alert mind. Always his was the role of peacemaker among men. He took a lively interest in the affairs of this city—its men and its policies. He knew what was important to the citizens of Lowell. He is a great loss, because we need men of his kind in the legal profession. His kindly spirit might well be emulated by us all. He was ever on the side of the lowly and oppressed."

"I cannot refrain from saying a few words," said Judge Enright, before adjourning the meeting. "I never in all my acquaintance with John McClure, heard him say an unkind word of anyone. I liked him as well as anyone I have ever met in the course of my profession. I hope that some day we can set a time for the public expression of our sentiments in this matter." An adjournment was taken at the conclusion of Judge Enright's remarks.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

"I WAS STARVED FOR A BITE OF PAPER"

The goat looked down in confusion when Mr. Hobdell, the clown, told Nancy and Nick that he had eaten their precious map.

"When did you do it?" asked Nick severely.

"Why did you do it?" asked Nancy.

"I did it when you turned your back to crawl out of the cave," confessed the goat. "And I did it for two reasons. First, because I was starved for a bite of paper. Second because I had promised Snitcher-Snatch to help him. The fact is, I have to help him whether I wish to or not, as I am enchanted."

"Surely not now," Nick reminded the goat. "You are standing on the equator."

The goat looked amazed. "Why, so I am! I never thought of that! Do you suppose I'll blow up, too, like the frog?"

"No, of course not," put in the clown. "You were always a goat, weren't you?"

"Yes," nodded the goat. "Except when I was a kid."

"That doesn't count," said the clown. "You're safe enough, but the spell is broken and you need not serve the wicked fairy any longer. But how about the map? These twins will need it to show them the rest of the way to the South Pole. You're a nice one!"

"Nice one yourself," retorted the goat. "Dear knows you have caused them enough trouble, but—hark! My stomach is sending a message to my brain. It's from the Map. The Map says to go straight through the Cave of Gnomes to Capticorn, where the cave is. After that there will be no more trouble. The Magic Green Shoes will take you children safely to the South Pole and the Cave of Snitcher-Snatch. The keys are in the large cupboard at the left side of the fireplace. The Golden Key will unlock it."

WASHINGTON, March 3.—President-elect Harding and President Wilson through a written message today extended their sympathy to Mrs. Champ Clark on the death yesterday of her husband, the democratic leader and former speaker of the house of representatives.

President-elect Harding accompanied by Mrs. Harding, leaving their hotel in Washington shortly after noon, called on Mrs. Clark late in the day. They spent about a quarter of an hour with Mrs. Clark, son of the dead house leader, and Mrs. Clark. The president-elect had previously extended his sympathy to Mrs. Clark in a telegram sent last night.

President and Mrs. Wilson tendered their sympathy earlier in the day in a letter, written by the president and delivered by a White House messenger. As another mark of respect to Mr. Clark's memory the president issued orders for the lowering to half-staff of all flags on government buildings during the funeral services here in the chamber of the house on Saturday and at Bowling Green, the former speaker's home, on Monday.

The expressions of sympathy from the president and president-elect however, were but two among hundreds that poured in all last night, all of today, and were continuing tonight to tell the bereaved family of the great place the dead leader had made for himself in the hearts of his countrymen.

The proceedings of the house, in which Mr. Clark served for more than a score of years, continued under the shadow cast by his death. Final preparations were made for the funeral services to be held Saturday forenoon in the house chamber and tonight the house laid aside the rush of last minute legislation for an hour to pay tribute to its former presiding officer and leader. Members filed with one another in exchanging the condolences and condolences of Mr. Clark as displayed on house floor and in committee room.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

Many Taken Out That Are Never Used

According to the records of the city clerk, there were 38 couples in Lowell during the past year who applied for their intentions of becoming husband and wife, and who for reasons best known to themselves, changed their minds. These form three classes, first, those who have applied for marriage licenses and who have never called for them; second, those who have had their names written on the book of "boys and girls," and who at a later date have cancelled the intention; and third, those who have taken out licenses and returned them unsigned, or in other words, have not gone through with the ceremony and have returned the license in compliance with the law.

Of course, if one were to pry into private affairs he would probably find a number of couples who have become engaged during the year, but have broken their engagement before going to the city clerk's office, but that is not of public interest. The records of marriage intentions at city hall show 21 marriage intentions have been filed, and the licenses not called for. There were nine licenses cancelled and five returned unsigned. In some cases the licenses have been cancelled by request of both the man and woman involved, while in others it was either the woman or the man who gave the order. In the case of the licenses not issued it was simply a matter of filing the application and not calling for the license later.

The unsigned licenses in every case have simply been returned to the city clerk without any explanation. On the matrimonial book are also 21 licenses that were issued during the past year, of which no return has been made. Some of them may never be returned, but those who fail to comply with the state law are liable to a fine. Others may be returned before the six months ascribed by law have expired. The law in this case reads as follows, and is printed in red ink on the marriage applications:

"Whoever performs a ceremony of marriage upon a certificate issued more than six months after it is issued, and who has not returned such certificate after having taken out such certificate

LOWELL SOCIAL SERVICE LEAGUE

An appeal for funds to carry on its social welfare work during the coming year is made by the Lowell Social Service League, which needs $5000 immediately. Unless this sum is forthcoming from the public-spirited citizens of this city, it is stated that the organization will be forced to curtail its work, if not to cease all activities. During the past year the personal service of the Red Cross was carried on under the direction of this body, which combined this war-time work with its usual place work. The league desires for 1920 to continue to do the things it has accomplished in the past. It seeks funds to alleviate temporary distress of families, place them on the high road to independence, and put them in contact with the city's best and most helpful influences. It also aims to arrange for the co-operation of Lowell charities. For this purpose it has carried on a confidential exchange, registering the various organizations interested in assisting deserving families which are having difficulties in making both ends meet. Its third object, as announced, is "To promote the general welfare of the community by making known its needs and helping to supply the remedy when there is no other agency better fitted for the task."

During the past year, the association has received requests for assistance from 1135 families, and where financial aid has been necessary this has been supplied. Either of the league's officers, or those given through the medium of the league by churches, relief societies, and other agencies, have been always at the disposal of those suffering from straightened circumstances. Work has been secured for many. Medical treatment and care has been provided. In other words, the league seeks to prove itself an unfailing source of help where help is needed.

RETURN OF CONSTANTINE

Sunday at the Opera House the first showing in Lowell of the motion picture "The Return of Constantine" will be given through the medium of the league by churches, relief societies, and other agencies, have been always at the disposal of those suffering from straightened circumstances. Work has been secured for many. Medical treatment and care has been provided. In other words, the league seeks to prove itself an unfailing source of help where help is needed.

FURTHER COMPENSATION

James Mulvey, who was injured while at work in the Saco-Lowell shop Aug. 14, 1918, and who received compensation because of his injuries up to and including Aug. 22, 1920, is entitled to further compensation, according to a notice received recently by Patrick J. Reynolds, counsel for Mr. Mulvey, from Frank J. Donahue of the industrial accident board. Mr. Mulvey returned to work in the Saco-Lowell shop Aug. 23, 1920, but a week later he had to give up and accordingly his compensation stopped. He will now receive $14 a week until such time as his disability is partially or totally removed.

EDITOR DECLARES HE WAS KIDNAPPED

TORONTO, Ont., March 4.—Henry Potter, editor of a Philadelphia Hebrew paper which has been attacking Henry Ford for alleged anti-semitism and who recently was reported mysteriously to have disappeared while seeking to interview the manufacturer, arrived at police headquarters here yesterday with a story of having been kidnapped by three men on Mr. Ford's estate near Detroit.

To the police and newspapermen he told the following tale:

"That on the night of Feb. 13, after two ineffectual attempts to see Mr. Ford, he visited his estate and was seized by the trio; that he was driven away in an automobile and threatened with death after making several attempts to escape; that he was taken from Detroit across the border into Windsor; that he was informed he was being taken to Cochrans' never to go back to the states again; and that finally he escaped from his captors at West Toronto station."

At the time of Potter's reported disappearance, Mr. Ford was first to order a search made for him, fearing he might have fallen through the ice on a pond on his estate. The search was discontinued after it was reported friends had received telegrams from Potter several days after he dropped out of sight.

NORTH BILLERICA

A largely attended meeting of Loyal Asa Pollard lodge, 1000, M. U. of North Billerica was held Wednesday night and a feature of the meeting was the initiation of a large class of members, the exercises being conducted by the degree staff of integrity lodge of this city. Interesting remarks were made by Provincial Grand, Deputy George W. Busley of this city. Refreshments were served and entertainment numbers were given.

NORTH CHELMSFORD

There will be no formal observance of St. Patrick's day in North Chelmsford this year because of the industrial depression in that part of the town. This decision was arrived at at a recent meeting of the Catholic societies of the North. The Chelmsford Catholic club, however, will hold a concert on the evening of March 12.

Continued

among individuals, among peoples, among governments, and it will inaugurate an era of good feeling to mark the birth of a new order. In such a new order, men will strike confidently for the promotion of the better relationship and nations will promote the common good to peace.

Trade Ties Bind Closely

"Our eyes never will be blind to a developing menace, our ears never deaf to the call of civilization. We recognize the new order in the world, with the closer contacts which progress has wrought. We sense the call of the human heart for fellowship, fraternity and co-operation. The America built on the foundation laid by the inspired fathers, can be a party to no permanent military alliance. It can enter into no political compact, nor assume any economic obligations, or subject our decisions to any other than our own authority.

"I am sure our own people will not misunderstand me with the world's conscience. We have no thought to impede the paths to closer relationship. We wish to promote understanding. We want to do our part in making governments and peoples who respect opinion to peaceful co-operation, or subject our decisions to any other than our own authority.

Association For Common

We are ready to associate ourselves with the nations of the world, great and small, for conference, for counsel, to seek the expressed views of world opinion to peaceful co-operation, or subject our decisions to any other than our own authority.

Our Supreme Task

Our supreme task is the assumption of our onward normal way. Reconstruction, readjustment, restoration, all that must follow, would like to have them. If it will lighten the spirit and add to the resolution with which we take up the task, let me repeat for our nation, we shall give no people just cause to make war upon us. We hold no national prejudices, we entertain no spirit of revenge, we do not hate, we do not covet, we dream of no conquest, nor boast of armed powers.

If, despite this attitude, war is again forced upon us, I earnestly hope it may be found which will unify our individual and collective strength and consecrate all America, materially and spiritually, body and soul, to national defense. I can vision the ideal republic, where every man and woman is called under the flag for assignment to duty, for whatever service, military or civic, the individual is best fitted, where we may call to universal service every plant, agency or factory, all in the sublime sacrifice for profit that inure to the benefit of private individual, corporation or community, but all above the normal, shall flow into the defense chest of the nation. There is something inherently wrong, something out of accord with the ideals of representative democracy when one portion of our citizenship turns its activity to private gain and another to public duty in the light of the suffering or dying for national preservation.

Unity of Spirit and Purpose

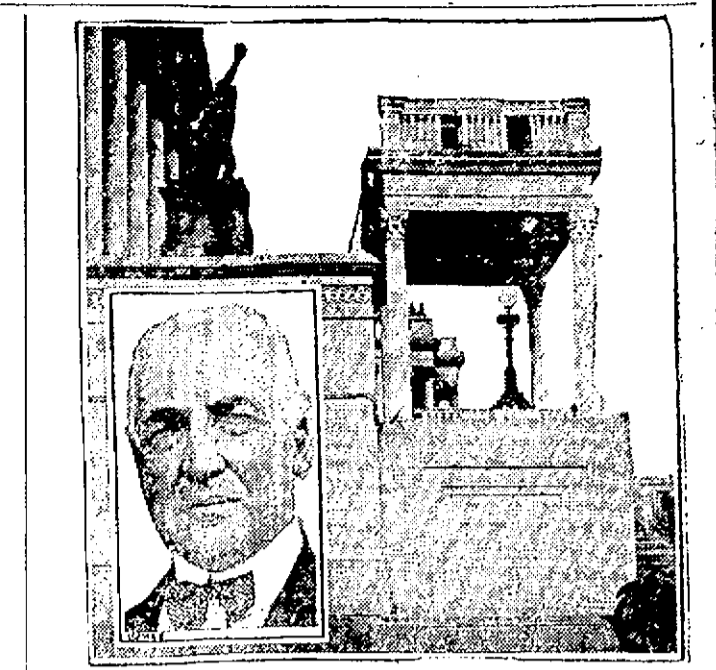

Out of such universal service will come a new unity of spirit and purpose, a new confidence and co-operation, which would make our defense impregnable, our triumph assured.

Then we should have little or no disorganization of our economic, industrial and commercial systems at home, no staggering war debts, no swollen fortunes to flout the sacrifices of our soldiers, no excuse for sedition, no pitiful slackness, no outrage of treason. They and jealousy would have no room for their menacing development, and a new confidence and co-operation, which would make our defense impregnable, our triumph assured.

Prayer for Industrial Peace

I wish for an America no less alert in guarding against dangers from within than it is watchful against enemies from without. Our fundamental law recognizes no class, no group, no faction. There must be no legislation or administration. The supreme inspiration is the common weal. Humanity's hunger for international peace and we crave it with all mankind. My next reverent prayer for America is for industrial peace, with its reward, industry and generally distributed and the inspirations of equal opportunity.

No one may justly deny the equality of opportunity which made us what we are. We have mistaken our duty to embrace it to be a challenge of the reality; and the concern for making all citizens fit for participation will give added strength of citizenship.

THE INAUGURAL STAND

If revolution insists upon overturning established order, let other peoples make the tragic experiment. There is no place for it in America. When world was threatened civilization we pledged our resources and our lives to its preservation, and when revolution threatens we defend the flag of law and order and renew our consecration. Ours is a constitutional freedom where the popular will is the law supreme and minorities are sacredly protected. Our revisions, reforms and evolutions reflect a deliberate judgment and an orderly progress, and we mean to preserve our life, but never destroy or permit destruction by force.

I had rather submit our industrial controversies to the conference table in advance than to a settlement table after conflict and suffering. The earth is thirsting for the cup of good will. Understanding is its fountain source. I would like to acclaim an era of good feeling and dependable prosperity and all the blessings which attend it.

It has been proposed again and again that we cannot, while throwing our markets open to the world, maintain American standards of living and opportunity and hold our industrial supremacy in such unequal competition. There is a glaring fallacy in the theory of banished barriers of trade, but preserved American standards require our higher production costs to be reflected in our tariffs on imports.

Today, as never before, when people are seeking trade, freedom and expansion, we must adjust our tariffs to the new order. We seek participation in the world's exchanges because therein lies our way to wealth and influence and the triumph of peace. We know full well we cannot sell where we do not buy and we cannot sell successfully where we do not carry.

Opportunity is calling not alone for the restoration, but for a new era in production, transportation and distribution. We shall answer it best by meeting the demand of a vast home market, by promoting self reliance in production and by holding enterprise, genius and efficiency to carry our cargoes in American bottoms to the markets of the world.

An American of Honors

We would not have an America living within and for herself alone, but we would have her self reliant, independent and ever nobler, stronger and richer. Believing in our higher standards, reared through constitutional liberty and maintained opportunity, we invite the world to the same heights. But pride in things wrought is no reflex of a completed task. Common effort is the goal of our national endeavor. We are not infatuated with the past. We are not infatuated with the future. It ought to be its friendliest agency.

There never can be equality of reward or possessions so long as the human mind contains varied talents and differing degrees of industry and thrift. We ought to find a way to guard against the perils and penalties of unemployment. We want an America of homes illuminated with hope and happiness, where mothers, freed from the necessity for long hours of toil beyond their own doors, may preside as befits the hearthstones of American citizenship. We want the cradle of American childhood rocked under conditions so wholesome and so hopeful that no blight may touch it in its development and we want to provide that no selfish interest, no material necessity, no lack of opportunity shall prevent the gaining of that education so essential to best citizenship.

There is no short cut to the making of a better world. The world has witnessed, again and again, the fallacy and the mischief of ill-considered remedies for social and economic disorders. But we are mindful today as never before of the friction of modern industrialism and we must learn its causes and reduce its evil consequences by sober and tested methods. Where penies has made for great possibilities justice and happiness must be reflected in a greater common welfare.

Service the Supreme Commitment

Service is the supreme commitment of life. I would rejoice to acclaim the era of the golden rule and crown it with the authority of Service. I pick up an administration wherein all the activities of government are called to serve and ever promote an unbroken chain of service.

THOMAS J. NOUCAS Auctioneer
Office 5 Hanover St., Lowell, Mass. Telephone 3337

Two-Story House, at 226 Worthen St., the Premises Known as "The Agent's House," to the Highest Bona Fide Bidder
ON SATURDAY, MARCH 5, 1921, AT 2 O'CLOCK
IN THE AFTERNOON

The house is one of the most attractive ones, and no such bargain has been offered for sale for a long time. It is built on a lot containing nine thousand, one hundred and six feet of land, right in the middle of the city. It is near school and churches, also near the business section of the city. This is a very attractive proposition for one who wants to buy a home or for one who wants to make a very profitable investment for the future.

Terms: $400.00 must be deposited with the auctioneer as soon as property is struck off. Other terms made known at the sale.

By order of the Board of Directors of the Greek Orthodox Community.
The President, C. ZOROGOS
The Secretary, D. ATHANASSOULAS

CARD AND FUND DELIGHTED

A collision between a one-man car and a Ford truck occurred at the corner of Merrimack and Essex streets shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, when the automobile swung into Merrimack street. No one was injured and the damage was slight.
